Stay on the Farm.
Speaking of the tendency to leave the farm, the president said:

Ambitious native-born men and women who now tend away from the farm must be brought back to it, and therefore they must have social as well as economic opportunities. Everything should be done to encourage the growth in the open farming country of such institutional and social movements as will meet the demand of the best type of farmers. There should be libraries, assembly halls, social organizations of all kinds. The school building and the teacher in the school building should be made the center of life in the country districts, be of the very highest type, able to fit the boys and girls not merely to live in, but thoroughly to enjoy and to make the most of the country. The country church must be revived. All kinds of agencies, from rural free delivery to the bicycle and the telephone, should be utilized to the utmost; good roads should be favored; everything should be done to make it easier for the farmer to lead the most active and effective intellectual, political and economic life.

Need of Co-operation.
Farmers must learn the vital need of co-operation with one another. Next to this comes co-operation with the government, and the government can best give its aid through associations of farmers rather than through the individual farmer; for there is no greater agricultural problem than that of delivering to the farmer the large body of agricultural knowledge which has been accumulated by the national and state governments and by the agricultural colleges and schools. Nowhere has the government worked to better advantage than in the south, where the work done by the Department of Agriculture in connection with the cotton growers of the southwestern states has been phenomenal in its scope.

The farmers in the region affected by the boll weevil, in the course of the efforts to fight it, have succeeded in developing a most scientific husbandry, and that in many places the boll weevil became a blessing in disguise. Not only did the industry of farming become of very much greater economic value in its direct results, but it became immensely more interesting to thousands of families. The meetings at which the new subjects of interest were discussed grew to have a distinct social value, while with the farmers were joined the merchants and bankers of the neighborhood.

Protection in Organization.
The people of our farming regions must be able to combine among themselves, as the most efficient means of protecting their industry from the highly organized interests which now surround them on every side. A vast field is open for work by co-operative associations of farmers in dealing with the relation of the farm to transportation and to the distribution and manufacture of raw materials. It is only through such combination that American farmers can develop to the full their economic and social power.

All over the country there is a constant complaint of paucity of farm labor. Without attempting to go into all the features of this question, I would like to point out that you can never get the right kind, the best kind, of labor if you offer employment only for a few months, for no man worth anything will permanently accept a system which leaves him in idleness for half the year. And most important of all, I want to say a special word on behalf of the one who is too often the very hardest worked laborer on the farm—the farmer's wife. Reform, like charity, while it should not end at home, should certainly begin there; and the man, whether he lives on a farm or in a town, who is anxious to see better social and economic conditions prevail through the country at large, should be exceedingly careful that they prevail first as regards his own womankind.

The best crop is the crop of children; the best product of the farm are the men and women raised thereon; and the most instructive and practical treatises on farming, necessary though they be, are no more necessary than the books which teach our duty to our neighbor, and, above all, to the neighbor who is of our own household.

Nothing outside of home can take the place of home. The school is an invaluable adjunct to the home, but it is a wretched substitute for it. The family relation is the most fundamental, the most important of all relations. No leader in church or state, in science or art or industry, however great his achievement, does work which compares in importance with that of the father and the mother, who are the first of sovereigns and the most divine of priests.

Secretary Wilson on the Farmer.
The subject of the address of Secretary Wilson was "Three Things Last Century." He said:

It has been said that the United States did three unique things in the last century. It built at Washington the Capitol, the cept a system which leaves him in idleness for half the year. And most important of all, I want to say a special word on behalf of the one who is too often the very hardest worked laborer on the farm—the farmer's wife.

Secretary Wilson on the Farmer.
The subject of the address of Secretary Wilson was "Three Things Last Century." He said:

It has been said that the United States did three unique things in the last century. It built at Washington the Capitol, the personal library, each the finest of its kind. A much greater work was the laying of the foundation of agricultural education and research to prepare for the life work of the agriculturist. It is a high level of efficiency as a producer and citizen of our country on earth has such a comprehensive system to bring about these results. The total number of independent colleges is sixty-five, and sixty-three of those give courses in agriculture, which are attended by 19,000 students. These colleges are also largely engaged in giving instruction to agriculture to adult farmers in the farm institutes, which are annually attended by over 900,000 farmers. These institutions have received from the federal government to $1,000,000 and an annual revenue of $1,500,000, to which the federal government contributes $1,000,000 and the state governments $1,500,000.

The work is telling in many ways. Young people in these more or less would not go to any other. There is a great demand at home and abroad for young people trained along the agricultural lines. Farm boys and girls are being educated for the farm. It is the most delightful and comprehensive of mankind things to which the mind can be applied.

Federal and State Work.

There has been steady progress during the half century that marks the work of Agricultural College, college, congress has endowed educational and research institutions in the states and territories. The federal government has co-operated with the states and operated where the work was interstitial. The movement to education is a national movement, and the sciences that are to have his future attention. These combined efforts will result in the production of a new generation of agriculturists. Discussions of climates, soils, movements of moisture, plants and their animal products, the value of insects, and their application, will all become familiar to the student of the future.

Suppose each of the gentlemen invited here to rejoice with the Michigan Agricultural Experiment Station, were asked to tell you why we need agricultural colleges, his reasons on his observation of the soil and the water level in not being laid deep enough—most plants require roots to go down five feet for nutrition, the roots stop when they reach stagnant water and only that which is above the water level. I see drains being dug down to forty-eight inches at least, for reasons that every student in the field can see, but which are evidently not known to farmers generally. As the science of soils becomes better understood, the raising of wheat and of the past will be done over again.

Improvements in Pastures.

I have observed on my way here that decided improvement can be made in the pasture, which makes our most valuable crop and is our best recuperating agent. A majority of farmers have only one growing season, and the soil is exhausted. Grasses are at their best at different seasons, then they rest for a time. They should be sown every other year. There is no reason why pastures have no legumes growing with the grasses. The soil is at its best in the soil or climate should be under tribute. The office of the legume is to keep the soil fertile. The agricultural colleges should do demonstration work along such lines as pasturing and the raising of what we call sheep. Perhaps it should be done through other state agencies, in co-operation with college faculties. It is not the business of the research work that his nothing, that is not applied to something, that helps no farmer of any kind, but that is to be a practical science. We must make good and find pots of gold at the ends of all our rainbows.

Including the population of our island possessions, half of the people under our flag are of foreign birth, and it is our duty to the other to prepare themselves for discharging the duties of citizenship with the highest intelligence. They are financially able to educate, as 72 per cent of our exports—$80,000,000—is the price of farm products sold abroad annually. They have the money and the ability to acquire the language and the habits of the people. Rural free delivery of mails, the telephone, the daily and frequent newspaper, and other sources of information combine to form powerful adjuncts in the education of the foreigner in his new home. He should be organized as a class, and are not likely to be, but they are the nation's jury when questioned by public opinion as to their conduct.

Address of President James.

President E. J. James of Illinois university was unable to be present. His address was read by Dean Eugene Davenport of the agricultural department of Illinois university.

He said in part:

The demand for special professional education, the training of the farmer and the mechanic and one which few people trained in any other line of education are even able to estimate at its true value. Now every day we see some new kind of school springing into existence which is intended to satisfy this demand for special and special preparation.

The agricultural education, it seems to me in certain directions, outruns and is today in advance of the development of education in other lines. The movement for agriculture and the mechanic has benefited all our higher education in several of our lines of study.

Some of our American states were not cultured schools upon the requisite scale, and the principle of state education has borne fruit in every direction. We see it in the case of California, where an institution which I represent here today, and which has been developed what will ultimately be the best of our centers of scientific investigation and practical training which the world has ever seen.

President Benjamin D. Wheeler of the University of California, presented the greetings of the Pacific coast, and addresses were also made by President Rufus H. Stimpson of the State Agricultural college of Stors, Conn.; President James B. Angell of the University of Michigan and Dean D. H. C. White of the agricultural department of the University of Georgia.

FRENCH PORTS ARE TIED UP

Hundred Thousand Men in Maritime Service Go on Strike.

OCEAN COMMERCE ALMOST PARALYZED

La Provence and La Gasconne Will Not Sail for New York Because Every Man in Crew Abandons the Ships.

PARIS, May 31.—A general strike of sailors and others belonging to the French naval reserve began at almost all the ports of France at daylight today and threatens the complete paralysis of French commerce. The navigation companies are making energetic representations to the government, claiming that the movement is not directed against them and saying that unless it is settled immediately it will cause untold injury to French commerce.

The naval reserves comprise nearly the entire maritime population engaged in seafaring life and number about 157,000 men, of whom 5,000 are serving in the navy. In addition to practically all the sailors of the mercantile marine most of the longshoremen belong to the naval reserve.

The strike was declared by the executive committee of the National Seamen's union because the government's new bill increasing pensions from $40.80 to $72.50 in the case of seamen and from $58 to $200 in the case of captains is regarded by the members of the union as being inadequate.

THIRTY THOUSAND TAKE ARMS

Revolt in China Gains in Strength and Leaders Are Capable Men.

AMOI, China, May 31.—An insurrection has broken out forty miles southward of Amoy. Thirty thousand rebels are under arms and are stated to be well led. The revolt is spreading to towns near Amoy. The viceroys of Fu Chow is sending 8,000 troops to deal with the rising and warships are expected here shortly.

WILL ABANDON ABSOLUTISM

King Charles of Portugal Consents to Accept Deputations from Houses of Parliament.

LISBON, May 31.—King Charles has agreed to receive deputations from the House of Peers and the lower house of Parliament, who desire to petition his majesty for the restoration of government on the basis of national sovereignty. The king said he would receive the deputations and in addition would support their views, which would indicate that the king is willing to abandon the state of absolutism which has prevailed since Parliament was dissolved, May 11.
