SEASON FOR VEGETABLES Time is here for Digestion of Cooler and Lighter Foods. ALL-ROUND SUPPORT OF VEGETARIANISM

There is no better time than the summer to study and practice vegetarian doctrines; when the fruits are coming and the vegetables are fresh from Mother Earth, giving their waving leaves and putting forth the blossom which shall soon become the matured fruit that forms the staple of vegetable food.

And God said: Behold, I have given you every herb bearing seed which is upon the face of all the earth, and every tree in which is the fruit of a tree yielding seed; to you it shall be for meat.

Then said Daniel to Melzar, the steward: Prove thy servants, I beseech thee, ten days, and let them give no pulse to eat and water to drink. Then let our countenances be looked upon before Thine eyes, the countenance of the children that eat of the portion of the king's meat; and as Thou seest: Deal with Thy servants, so be counted to them in this matter and proved them ten days.

Dr. Alcott says "twenty-two acres of land are needed to sustain one man in flesh meat. Under what land will feed forty-two people, under oats eighty-eight, under potatoes, maize or rice 176, under the banana over 300. The nations of the future must abandon flesh eating for a diet that will feed more than tenfold people by the same soil, expense and labor.

Men Who Kill Ostracized. Mrs. Annie Besant says: "Lately I have been in the city of Chicago, one of the greatest slaughter houses of the world, where the slaughter men, who are employed from early morn till late at night in the killing of thousands of these hapless creatures, are made a class practically apart from their fellowmen; they are marked out by the police as the most dangerous part of the community. Amongst them are committed most crimes of violence. The most ready use of the knife is found. And every day who are employed in the butchering; everyone who uses what they provide is guilty of this degradation of his fellowmen."

There is the vegetarian argument from the ethical side. In a long distance of walking endurance of seventy miles in Germany some years ago of the twenty-two starters eight were vegetarians. Five of them made it within the prescribed eighteen hours and the other two came in a little late. Only one meat eater appeared an hour after the last vegetarian; the rest dropped off after thirty-five miles.

There is the vegetarian argument from the practical side. The warmth of the season helps the body to digest readily the foods. Less heat producing foods are needed, and therefore logically a vegetable diet is indicated at this season.

Asparagus Sauce With Mock Meat Balls—Beat three-quarters of a cup of cold butter to the boiling point, stir in three tablespoons of dried and rolled bread crumbs, a heaping tablespoon of flour and a level teaspoon of sugar. When boiled until it does not adhere to the sides of the pan, remove from fire and when partly cool beat in three eggs, one at a time, then two beating together. Add a small onion, washed and cut in small pieces, a teaspoon of onion juice, salt, pepper and a teaspoon of onion juice. Make into small flat cakes, dip in flour and brown in hot butter in a frying pan. Mash and scrape a bunch of asparagus, cut in inch pieces, laying aside the tips, cover the rest with boiling salted water, add a small onion sliced and cook until tender; drain in the water in which it is boiled and rub through sieve. Beat a tablespoon of butter in a frying pan, add an equal amount of flour and cook, then stir in the asparagus stock, add a half cup of water and the tips and cook until well thickened. Put in the meat cakes, heat and serve on slices of toast bread.

Tomato and Mushrooms—Cook a pint of tomatoes until nearly all the water has evaporated, add salt, pepper, a tablespoon each of butter and bread crumbs and a cup of fresh mushrooms, which have been quickly washed, peeled and chopped fine. Cook in the tomatoes are tender and serve on slices of toast bread.

Pineapples Meringue—Pare and grate a small pineapple; cream, two tablespoons rounding of butter, add three of sugar, add the yolks of three eggs and the white of one beaten together, the grated pineapple and two rounding tablespoons of brown crumbs. Turn into a pudding dish and bake twenty minutes. Beat the whites of three eggs, add three rounding tablespoons of sugar and beat again. Spread over the pudding, set the dish in a pan of hot water and bake slowly about fifteen minutes. Serve cold.

Police on New Schedule—The police on active patrol between the hours of 10 p. m. and 6 a. m., and between those hours more men will be on beats at one time than have ever been on regular duty in the city at one time in many years. Herebefore the second detail, from 4 to 12 p. m., with about twenty-five men, has been the largest detail of the day, giving place to less than half that number after midnight. Now, however, the number will increase to 10 p. m., and leave about thirty men on beats from midnight until 6 a. m.

Perils of the Cooling Plant Ammonia Refrigerating Process is Classed as Extra Hazardous for Workmen. During the last five months twenty-two persons have been killed and many times that number injured by accidents in the cooling rooms of one packing house. In addition there is reason to believe that other accidents happened in the same establishments which did not become known to the public because these men are not life. Could these accidents have been prevented? Some of them, perhaps, but not all of them under existing conditions.

The danger of the ammonia refrigerating process lies in the great pressure of expanding gas within the cooling pipes. This is caused by the fact that the square inch, is resisted by iron pipes of a thickness of 1/2 inch.

ness to resist, theoretically, 2,000 pounds to the square inch. The pressure causes a certain amount of wear upon the pipes, especially at the joints. As there is always a thick coating of rust upon the pipes it is impossible to make an adequate inspection to determine possible corrosion except by putting them out of commission for a time. Even if the minimum life of a joint could be determined and all joints renewed after a certain length of service the operation would require a large number of men and such frequent interruption of service as to be impracticable in the case of a plant with miles of pipes.

An explosion of the pipes containing ammonia is peculiarly dangerous in a packing house, because the men at work there are in rooms tightly closed by thick partitions and heavy doors. Although there are stopcocks at frequent intervals, the gas has such an overwhelming effect upon anyone who is exposed to it that the chances are decidedly against his being able to reach a stopcock in time to save his life. The danger is not so much in the violence of the explosion as in the resulting escape of the gas. In an artificial ice factory the danger of such a plant is not so acute, for it is not to the chill of the gas that the danger is, but to the weight of the ammonia. The only sure way to prevent explosions is to have every cooling plant duplicated, so that every bit of the piping may be shut out of service without the expense of duplication of plants is also prohibitive.

Only sure way of escaping the effects of the gas in case of an explosion is to wear a suit like a diver's with an independent supply of air, but the weight and awkwardness of such a costume would interfere seriously with work. As the case stands now this occupation must be classed among the extra hazardous. The men who enter it are in the same category with soldiers, firemen, and other men who deliberately risk their lives. The owners of such a plant are not excused from making every reasonable effort to anticipate and prevent an explosion, but it will be impossible to remove the risk entirely until there shall be a duplication of plants or until some substitute for ammonia, as serviceable but less dangerous than it, shall have been discovered.—Chicago Tribune.

NEGLECT TO DRAW WAGES Suing Sum of Unclaimed Money in Treasury of a Texas Railroad. Not less than $3,000,000 in unclaimed wages checks is awaiting claimants in the treasury of the Sunset lines of Texas. Not a thousandth part ever will be claimed or the owners would have called for it long ago. The money is kept in a special fund, and if a laborer shows up twenty years later and can prove his claim the money will be paid to him. In this way the railroad company draws from the United States, for on all government work unpaid wages are accredited to the general fund after the expiration of a year, and the government is just that much ahead.

It is hard to believe that such an immense sum as $3,000,000 could accrue through the laborers' drawings. United States, for on all government work unpaid wages are accredited to the general fund after the expiration of a year, and the government is just that much ahead.

What to do with the money is a question that has never been answered by the railroad company. The practice in the past has been to keep it in trust, but the amount is looming to such large proportions that some other disposition must be sought. It probably will reach $10,000,000 in the next year, and no doubt many of the claimants long since are dead.—Houston Post.

ROBBED BY SOUVENIR HUNTERS Italian Warship Lotted by Some Guests at a Jamestown Function. The American souvenir hunter was particularly conspicuous and greedy at a recent function on board the flagship of the Italian fleet at Hampton Roads. Admiral Evans reported the scandal in person to the authorities in Washington and publicly expressed his indignation in no uncertain terms.

"I was deeply mortified when it was reported to me that the duke of the Abruzzi and his officers had been robbed," said Admiral Evans to a Washington Post reporter. "In my general orders I took occasion to say that guests on board war vessels would not be permitted to visit the private quarters of the officers unaccompanied by a member of the staff."

"I have had so much experience with souvenir hunters that I am not at all surprised that the duke of the Abruzzi and his officers suffered from their vandalism. The American souvenir hunter will steal anything except a cellar full of water. I know, for I have been the victim of their raids on more than one occasion. After numerous losses on board the various vessels which I have commanded I finally gave orders that no visitors should be permitted to go into the private quarters on any vessel unless an officer or a member of the crew accompanied them. Numerous times the ships under my command have been practically stripped of everything that could be carried away."

"At Boston on one occasion I was in command of the Indiana, a reception was given on board the ship. It was the first time a first-class war ship had visited Boston harbor, the Indiana being the first vessel of that class. Probably 10,000 persons visited the ship, and when the reception was over and we went to turn on the searchlight, we found that even the carbons had been taken. The screws on the searchlight had been taken out and the big lamp was left for use. An examination of the two dozen or more guns showed that all gunights had been carried away, while the officers' quarters had been depleted of everything that could be taken.

"At another time in New York a reception was given on board the New York and after it was over I went into my room to write a letter. I found that every bit of writing paper that bore the crest of the battleship had been taken away. Gunights and other parts of the armament had been stolen.

"This is peculiar to America. I have had receptions on board my vessels in nearly every country in the world, but in no place other than America have I ever missed anything. At Kiel, Germany, there were probably a thousand persons present at a dance on the New York, but not a pin was taken. "The reception given by the duke of the Abruzzi in Hampton Roads occurred in the afternoon and upward of 600 persons were guests of the duke and his officers. No precautions were taken to guard against theft. It was not a card reception and any person could have gone aboard. Boats were runnng back and forth from shore to ship and it would have been possible for professional thieves to have got aboard the Varese, but from past experiences it is my opinion that the duke's loss is attributable to the unscrupulous penchant of Americans to collect souvenirs."

Hawk Carries Off a Cat. A large hawk has kept the farmers in the vicinity of Fortonia, Wayne county, Pa., in a state of alarm the last two years by carrying off the choicest poultry.

Passengers on the Delaware and Hudson trains frequently saw the big bird carry off its prey, but the hawk waited until Saturday to spring a real surprise. The passengers saw the bird swoop down on a cat belonging to Frank Horst, an express messenger. The cat put up a good fight, but pretty soon the hawk had kitty by the back and the red ribbon on the cat's neck could be seen fluttering hundreds of feet in the air until it disappeared over the hills. The cat weighed six pounds.
