Howard County Statesman Says New Laws Show People Will Get Just as Good Government as

"I never knew of a plainer illustration of dent of the constitutional convention, today the power of public sentiment than the issued a proclamation calling an election work of our last legislature," said former August 6, when the constitution framed by State Senator A. "The legislature enacted those laws for which the people had been clamoring and it did that simply because of the power of public sentiment. As to the fidelity of the members of the legislature there can be no doubt: as to the wisdom of all the laws enacted there may be some doubt. That is a question which time must settle. I am not the one to say any measure placed on the statute books was bad or unwise, but I am inclined to believe the people after some of those laws have been oper- sentenced to one year in the penitentiary ago. ative for a time than they were at the by Judge Troup Wednesday morning. Doubts Primary Law's Wisdom. "As I have said, I am not the one to attack the work or any part of the work of the last legislature, but I do have some misgivings as to the wisdom and practibility of at least one measure it passed, namely the state-wide primary law. I doubt if in a state like ours where we have so many sparsely settled communities that law will accomplish the good it would in an older and more thickly populated state or will accomplish as much good as its patrons expect of it. However, I do not wish to crticise the legislature for enacting the law, since it was apparently in response to the will of the majority of the people and this is a government by the people. It is one time in the history of Nebraska that the people have had their say. And that is, in my judgment, praise enough for any legislature."

The W. B. Reduso Corset S a boon for large women—the ideal garment for overdeveloped figures requiring special restraint. It not only restrains the tendency to over-fleshiness, but it moulds the over-developed proportions into those pleasing, graceful outlines, hitherto thought to be attainable only by slighter figures. The particular feature of this model is the apron over the abdomen and hips, boned in such a manner as to give the wearer absolute freedom of movement.

But good or bad, wise or unwise, the result of that legislature as we have it in concrete form today demonstrates with unerring precision the force of the old adage that the people will get just as good government, just as good laws as they want, no better and no worse. It is folly to expect anything else; it is folly to elect one kind of men to office and expect another kind of government. Like begets like in matters of legislation as much as in any sphere of life of which I can think just now.

"Two points then, are brought out with striking force by the record of this legislature-the power of public sentiment and come thoroughly aroused and organized and back of any proposition and that proposition will go through.
