Case of Two Much Smiths—Two dusky dancers, who subsequently gave the names of Alice Smith and Oig Smith to the police, met William Smith at Eighteenth and Capitol avenue Thursday evening and secured his pocketbook, containing $5. He discovered the loss and pursued them, when one drew a jackknife and threatened to "carve" him. W. L. Lynch happened along, took the knife away and called the police.

Petty Larceny for Wain Holdup—Red McFadden, the negro who held up A. Wain in the latter's loan office, 1311 Douglas street, Thursday, was charged with petty larceny in police court Friday. McFadden entered the store, took a revolver from the showcase and tried to hold up the proprietor. He was intoxicated.

Vinsonhale Case Delayed—A lull in the hearing of the case of the county against D. M. Vinsonhale for the recovery of fees collected by him as county judge came Friday morning, when by agreement the arguments in the case were continued until July 1. The testimony was concluded on Thursday and both sides consented to the delay.

Repairs on Farnam Street—The city asphalt repair gang has completed work on Farnam street between Twentieth and Thirty-eighth streets, and is now waiting for a car of material before starting repairs on Farnam east of Twentieth. A car of asphalt has been on the way to Omaha for several days but has been lost en route, and until it arrives the repair work will be delayed.

LIVELY FIGHT OVER WATER

Scott's Bluff Farmers Secure Dissolution of Court Injunction.

NOW ABLE TO DEMAND RIGHTS

Case Involves Irrigation in North Platte, Issue Being Between Tristate Land Company and Pioneer Farmers.

The temporary injunction granted by Judge Vandevanter of the federal court in the matter of the Tristate Land company against Clinton D. Baker and thirty-two other farmers and former incorporators of the Farmers' Ditch company of Scott's Bluff county was dissolved Friday morning by Judge W. H. Munger of the United States district court upon the motion of the attorney for the farmers. The case involves irrigation matters in the North Platte country. The defendants are among the pioneer projectors of irrigation in that section and incorporators of the Farmers Ditch company of Scott's Bluff county, a ditch of about thirteen miles in length. The company, by its articles of incorporation, secured to the stockholders perpetual water rights. A mortgage was given to complete the work and a few years later the mortgage was foreclosed and bought in by Robert Walker, subject to the perpetual water rights of the incorporators. Walker subsequently sold the property to the Tristate Land company subject to the original conditions of perpetual water rights to the original builders of the ditch. The Tristate Land company proceeded at once to close the ditch for the ostensible purpose of smothering and extending it. To this proceeding the farmers strenuously objected and threatened to use force in keeping the ditch open if the Tristate Land company persisted in closing it.

Injunction Stays Trouble.

The trouble threatened to become serious and the Tristate Land company made an application for a temporary injunction restraining the farmers from interfering with the work of enlargement. This application for an injunction was made before Judge Vandevanter in the United States court during the illness of Judge W. H. Munger and the application was denied. Subsequently the Tristate Land people secured a temporary restraining order from Judge Willis Vandevanter and the work of enlarging the canal proceeded and the water was shut off during this period, much to the disgust and inconvenience of the farmers. The matter was set for hearing before Judge W. H. Munger at Lincoln in the case of several of the defendants, but before it came to trial the injunction was withdrawn at the request of Dilworth & Kelly, attorneys for the Tristate Land company, and also the Burlington railroad, as regards the certain of the defendants who compromised their difficulties with the Tristate Land company.

Order is Sweeping.

However, the injunction, which was a sweeping one, prohibiting the defendants not only from interfering with the building and enlargement of the ditch, but also from going into court and thereby harass the Tristate Land company by any legal proceedings from enlarging the ditch, shutting off the water and from in any manner interfering with the work. The injunction held good as relating to Clinton D. Baker and the thirty-two other farmers, and it is this injunction that has just been dissolved by Judge W. H. Munger.

The defendants hold that the Tristate Land company has completely ignored their rights in the matter and instead of granting them perpetual water rights as provided under the original charter and which rights continued under all subsequent proceedings, are demanding excessive rates for water privileges.

With the dissolution of the injunction the farmers are now in a position to demand their rights and the prospects are for some lively times up along the line of that ditch.

Power Back of the Fight.

The fact that two principal attorneys for the Burlington railroad represent the Tristate Land company in this fight has given rise to the rumor that Burlington interests control this ditch and have inspired and supported the fight with the farmers, which threatens now to develop into a much more extensive affair.

The Tristate Land company, which operates in Colorado, Wyoming and Nebraska, tried to sell this ditch to the government, but the government didn't want to buy it. It is now in the hands of the government's irrigation service, is authority for the statement that the government didn't want the ditch, for the simple reason that it was not servicable to Uncle Sam, who had a ditch running parallel with this one and on high ground. This ditch, Mr. Newell pointed out, runs on lower ground.
