Union Pacific Statement.

The report of the Union Pacific railroad to the state board of assessment of the value of its property, shows this railroad has not depreciated in value during the last year. The gross earnings of the road have increased over $5,000,000 for the system, though the net earnings have decreased over $500,000. However, the road is not yet on the way to the poor house, having declared dividends during the year amounting to $2,581,282, which is over $2,000,000 in excess of the dividends declared the year before. The operation of the road, including the taxes, cost about $4,000,000 more than the year before, though there was a decrease of about the same amount in the betterment of the system. The following statistics show a comparison of the value of the road for the years 1906 and 1907 and the financial statement for the two years:

Sickness in Auditor's Office.

These are trying times for the employees in the office of the state auditor. Secretary Bennet of the State Board of Assessment is confined to his bed with sickness, and Henry Seymour, bookkeeper, is laid up from injuries received in a fall from a street car. These two looked after the matter of assessment, insofar as answering inquiries from county assessors and in making compilations for the state board is concerned. The reports from the assessors are just now coming in, and during the absence of Mr. Bennet and Mr. Seymour the work of looking after the assessment business has devolved upon Miss Tully, a county treasurer examiner, who has been called in off of the road to complete the work of the final settlement with county treasurers.
