Recently the board issued an order the marshall, Henry Graham, to shoot a dog belonging to J. S. Shafer, upon which no tax had been paid. Henry wayntered forth, armed. Finally he came upon a dog which could give no satisfactory account of itself, and Henry's gun was raised to his eye. He shot. The dog ran toward the home of Jack Keeky and dropped at the doorstep, dead. It was Jack Keeley's faithful bird dog, which he held priceless.
