Athletics at Y. M. C. A.

One of the finest samples of healthy onless yet breaking out of the Young Men's Christian association gymnasium split the ambient atmosphere Tuesday night and suggested a vociferous tornado. The cause was its being the first night of the athletic contests between the boys of the grammar schools of the city, When nine such schools get together under one roof there is a pretty fair prospect that something will be doing, and there was. Each of the nine schools participating in the contest was amply there was. Each of the nine schools participating in the contest was amply equipped with banners and pennants.

The trouble comprised six events—high jumps, twenty-yard dash, broad jump, relay race, 460-yard run and tug-of-war. The boys of the Central school had the largest number of contestants and won out in great shape, taking five of the six events, the relay race going to Farnam school. The scores were: Central, 34; Cass, 10; Farnam, 5; Columbia, 1; Bancroft, Beals, Castellar, Clifton Hill and Comenius.

The contests will be resumed Wednesday and Thursday nights, at which other schools will compete. The three highest teams from each night's contests will enter a general competition Friday night for the championship, which is now hold by Central school.

Anxiety to Live a Hundred Years Appears to Be Increasing in the East.

Certain New Yorkers again are stirred with the laudable ambitton to live to be a hundred years old, and more if possible, These New Yorkers, who are under the leadership of a physician, have mapped out courses to follow which they believe will result in long life. Strangely enough each one has different ideas. While one will eat no meat, another eats nothing else. One believes in gorging on fruit, while another declares it is "poison" to him. One woman member of the Hundred Year club drinks many tumblers of water during meals and between, while her husband never drinks clear water. And so it goes, No one has ever been able to give res sons for remarkably long lives. Dr. William George Meade, a celebrated physician in his day, died at his home in Tunbridge Wells, England, in 1652, at the age of 148 years and 2 months. His birth and death are matters of record, so there is no mistake about his age.

This extraordinary man was asked scores of times how he prolonged his life to such a length and he was never able to tell, but to go to bed at sunset and arise with the lark, spend all his time walking over the hills or resting under an awning. The patient was allowed two meals a day, at 8 in the morning and 4 in the afternoon. No liquor was allowed him, but he was permitted to smoke a certain brand of tobacco which Dr. Meade himself used. The result of this treatment was to make new men and women out of the patients of Meade .- New York Telegraph.

SOUL MATES AND THINGS

Affinities Under Other Names Offend Sensitive Nostrils Just the Same.

A Brooklyn married woman who has long maintained a "soul relationship" with another woman's husband is said to have imposed on him the condition of proving that his "spiritual" growth is as advanced as hers, failing which he must undergo another incarnation before claiming her as his own. He is not sure that he has attained the requisite state of psychic development to make him a satisfactory affinity.

Jacob served seven years for Rachel, a mare fleeting hour by comparison with this stipulated preparation for union." But apparently there will be some commutation for good behavior. A soul suitor whose kisses, it is slieged, are re-garded as "benedictions" by the fair object of his psychic affections, and who is represented by her as writing of her "dear eyes," "glorious eyes like rose petals," "delicious lips," etc., should certainly be able to qualify as an affility in less than the prescribed time.

The case is interesting as dispelling a popular delusion regarding the duration of "soul communions." So far from lasting into a future life, it had been generally supposed that the only time limit recognized made the soul partnership termin-able instantly on the discovery by either soul partner of a more attractive affinity.
