"Birth of a Nation" Barred From Ohio

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 8.—Selecting a time when Governor Willis was en route to California, to make application, the producers of the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," applied September 21 to the state board of censors to show the films in Ohio.

Believing the governor's declaration that no plays designed to incite racial hatred should be produced in Ohio while he was governor, the colored people of Ohio rested under the impression that the producers would not apply for permission to show in this state. They were, however, advised that application had been made, and two private shows given before the board of censors. Immediately arrangements were made to file a protest against a permit being granted. Various church and civic organizations among both races joined in the protest. The mayor of the city, George J. Karb; former Secretary of State D. J. Ryan, Dr. Washington Gladden, Rabbi Kornfield, and others signed the protest. A hearing was had and September 28 the state board of censors took final action on "The Birth of a Nation" moving picture, and issued an order barring it from the state of Ohio.

Under this order the vicious Dixon photoplay cannot be shown in this state, regardless of changes that might be made in the film.
