its banks to meet the waiting ocean. Is this figure far fetched?

Americanism Triumphant

In this parade all races and all classes of our polygenous people marched as Americans. Our own people were there in common with all the rest, sprinkled through all the ranks, as individuals identified with the trades or labor or mercantile houses; with the high school cadets, in its band and in the several companies. Then, too, there were the detachments of our people, the women, under their own marshal and a large detachment of men under their marshal Mrs. W. T. Osborne was marshal for the women's division and Edward Turner for the men. The First Regimental band which led the third division, was as usual, one of the most popular bands in the parade.

Flag Day in Omaha found true Americanism triumphant.
