THE IMPORTANCE OF THE CARE OF TEETH

The dentist is coming into his own, so to speak, for never before has the necessity for having good, clean, sound teeth been so impressed upon the minds of the medical profession and the public at large as it has been recently. Oral sepsis is now held to be responsible, both directly and indirectly, for many conditions of ill health and disease, and it is at last being recognized on all sides that the state of the teeth and mouth is a fair index of the general health.

A remarkable object lesson in this direction has been provided by the war in Europe. The exigencies of a soldier's life and especially the conditions of such a campaign as is going on at the present time render it incumbent that soldiers should be possessed of teeth that not only will allow them to thoroughly masticate the food that is put before them, but that are kept as free from decay and infection as possible. In fact, a soldier whose teeth are defective has been shown to be, in the majority of instances, unfit to serve in the army. Thus, as one important lesson of the war, has come in Great Britain and France a somewhat tardy recognition that a skilled dental service is one of the paramount needs in maintaining the efficiency of an army. Experience has shown that the dentist is needed not only to repair the defects of the soldier's teeth so that he may be able to eat well and consequently to fight well, but also in cases of jaw injuries, where proper construction together with satisfactory plastic results are impossible without the aid of skilled dental technique.—American Medicine.
