

Events and Persons

T. P. Mahammitt sprang a pleasant surprise on his wife last Saturday evening, it being their thirteenth wedding anniversary. Having sent her to town on an errand, the table was set for an elaborate ten-course dinner at which covers were laid for seven. The guests were concealed up stairs and at a given signal took their places at the table. Mrs. Mahammitt noticed that one guest had not arrived and asked who it was. Just then a "Mrs. Jones" was announced. This proved to be Mrs. Anna Burns, of Jackson, Mich., Mrs. Mahammitt's sister, who had come for the occasion.

Merchandise Is Getting Scarce

Now comes the British Government, taking possession of and confiscating all goods needed for army use. Self preservation is surely the first law of Nature, and the nations seem to be warring for their very life.

No one can tell what the future has in store.

Wisdom, however, suggests that we should all buy what we can for our needs NOW.
