"It was a terrible crime that these men committed. It has been terribly punished, and justly and properly punshed. No excuse could be made, no leniency shown to the men in the been trained to military discipline, and in defiance of officers they organized a mob under their own leaders for a general massacre or any and all persons who crossed their path.

"At the same time, the Houston riot and the events growing out of it should be a warning to Southern officials. At the start the Houston police were to blame. By their attitude pu toward Negro soldiers they created a feeling of bitter resentment that was finally responsible for the bloody outbreak that followed. The Negro soldiers who planned to do wholesale murder at Houston have been hanged or sent to prison for life, as justice requires, but nothing in the sentences imposed upon them can excuse the mistreatment of United States soldiers because their skins are black."
