TWO SLAVES

One the White Woman: the Other the Black Man.

Much has been written of the customs and traditions of the southland, the land of cotton and of cane. Custom has stood sponsor for many of the crimes enacted against the Negro. The one that has been the cause of more bitterness and prejudice than any other has been the license of the white man with the Negro woman and the protest of the white woman and the black man against it. The liberty granted the Negro woman to freely accept the association of the white male seemed to increase the desire in both parties to consummate this liaison to the moral detriment of the black race. For tradition in the south says that the white man can do no wrong. So if there is wrong done, only the black race is held responsible. The black man resents this in every conceivable manner that is within his power and sometimes he suffers the loss of his life when voicing his objections too loudly. The others of his race pray for the time to come when his women cease to be the filching ground for the depraved white man. As to the white woman and her cognizance of this condition it will be found in her attitude and manner when treating with the women of our race. She is ever resentful, vindictive and prejudiced, in all things concerning the Negro woman. Knowing of these relations of white men and Negro women is the one reason why the southern white women so bitterly opposed the admittance of the Colored women into the Red Cross.

AN "OWED" TO THE PRINT SHOP

By The Monitor Machine Po-it.

THERE'S mourning 'round the print shop
Of the Waters-Barnhart Co.,
For who knows where the thing will stop,
Or when the rest will go?

The first cyclone which hit the shack
Was when Unt Sam sent for "Cy,"
Who speedily hustled home to pack
And answered, "Here am I."

And who is "Cy"? You shivelling dolt,
Just ask the linotyper, Bob,
Whose answer quick will be a jolt:
"The ad man, always on his job."

"An artist in his line, you bet;
Who knows the 'biz' from end to end;
What ems and picas should be set;
A little cuss, but a loyal, true friend!"

And then Unc got his peepers on
Another dandy little chap,
And so he sent for Filip's John
To take a hand in the big scrap.

Now, Johnnie ran the cutter
And kept track of the stock,
So earning his bread and butter.
His going was a shock.

And there are many others
Who've left this printing shop
To fight with their brothers,
To make the kaiser flop.

There's hustling 'round the print shop
Of the Waters-Barnhart Co.;
For increasing business cannot stop
Even tho' others have to go.

So Charley Barnhart works by night;
His father night and day;
Ed Waters sticks by the business tight—
These three let nothing get away.
