DESDUNES BAND DELIGHTS THOUSANDS

An enthusiastic audience numbering nearly 3,000 filled the Auditorium last Sunday afternoon to listen to one of the finest band concerts ever given in the city of Omaha. The First Regimental band, Uniform Rank Knights of Pythias, popularly known as Desdunes band, gave its initial post-war concert under the management of Will Lewis. A well balanced program of classical and popular numbers, including cornet solos, trombone duets, saxophone quartets and other special features delighted the audience. This splendid organization has been increased to a membership of forty-five and the finished style in which they rendered each selection showed the diligent and painstaking work done under their proficient and conscientious leader, Dan Desdunes.

Sousa's great composition dedicated to the war brides and grooms of America was played for the first time in Omaha at this concert and carried the audience by storm. Repeated encores, graciously given, followed each number.

The audience was about equally divided between the races and all were most enthusiastic in their appreciation and praise of the splendid program given.

The Monitor is proud of this splendid organization and its talented and unselfish leader and extends congratulations to leader and men for their great musical triumph. Keep up the good work. You are making history and creating sentiment.
