DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE TWO BUFFALOES.

"We were different from most of our family," said one of the buffaloes in the zoo, whose name was Billy.

"Yes," said another buffalo, "Billy and I were different from most buffaloes."

"You speak the truth, Benny, when you agree with me," said Billy.

"Tell us about yourselves," said the other buffaloes.

"Well," said Billy, "I will let my partner speak. He is a better speaker than I am."

"Oh, nonsense," said Benny. "I do not mean to say that you speak nonsense, but in this case you are praising me entirely too much. You are the one who should do the speaking. You're the speaker buffalo, if there is to be a speaker buffalo."

"And there is surely to be a speaker buffalo," said the other buffaloes, for they wanted to hear the story.

"Well, you had better begin," said Billy.

"You had better begin," said Benny.

Both the buffaloes looked at each other and grinned. And the other buffaloes in the zoo said:

"There will be no speaking and there will be no story if one of you does not start."

"True," said Billy. "They're waiting for you, partner."

"True," agreed Benny. "And they're anxiously waiting to hear you start speaking," he added.

"Here, here," said one of the buffaloes, "this sort of thing can go on no longer. I will introduce the speakers of the evening and if you are both

"Yes," said Benny. "I did not want to do all the speaking myself, for I knew you could do so much better."

"I knew you could," said Billy, "but if we are both to speak they will at least have half of the time to listen to a good speech to make up for the half of the time when they have to listen to me."

"Exactly the way I feel about it," said Benny.

"Silence, partners," said the buffalo who had suggested that they both speak.

And the buffalo partners as well as the other buffaloes kept very still.

"We have with us this evening," began the buffalo, "two very fine speakers. They are both able to speak on any subject, but they are both so modest that they feel they aren't worth listening to on any subject."

All the buffaloes grunted and said:

"Let us hear these modest speakers."

"We shall hear them," continued the buffalo. "First of all it gives me great pleasure to introduce to you Mr. Benny Buffalo, and when he is through speaking Mr. Billy Buffalo will take the floor—or the ground, to be more correct. Anyway, I mean that he will speak next and last. So let me present to you Mr. Benny Buffalo."

Mr. Benny Buffalo stood before the other buffaloes while they all cheered.

"My partner and myself, fellow buffaloes," he began, "belonged to such a nice master. We weren't as wild as most buffaloes. We were tame. We used to be harnessed to a wagon and over the countryside we would go."

"Yes, fellow buffaloes, we've lived lives much like horses. It is interesting to be a buffalo and yet to have lived a life like another creature. It is like little girls who are really little girls and yet who play boys' games and climb trees. They're nice and interesting little girls, I have heard. And now my partner will speak."

"Fellow buffaloes," said Billy Buffalo, "we not only acted as horses might, but we raced horses. Yes, we used to race the team of horses the neighbor of the master had. We certainly have had different lives from most before we came to the zoo."

And all the buffaloes agreed.

His Ma—Willie, why don't you take your arithmetic and study your tables in the library?

Willie—Then, they'd be library tables, eh, ma?
