PROF. JAS. E. GREGG CALLS ATTENTION TO INCREASE OF NEGRO'S WEALTH SINCE 1866

(By Associated Negro Press.) Detroit, Mich., Nov. 5.—"Negroes like members of other advancing races are learning to do more and more things well. True, vocational training for them, therefore, must be more varied and more thorough than it has been," declared Prof. Jas. E. Gregg, principal of Hampton Institute, before the National Urban League for Social Service among Negroes in an address on "Training for More Skilled Work."

"Education for life is not a static term. Its meaning is constantly changing as the conditions of life change. In 1866 Negroes were conducting 2,100 business enterprises. Today they are conducting 50,000. In 1866 the accumulated wealth of American Negroes was $20,000,000. Today it is $1,110,000,000. Such an economic revolution should be and, indeed must be reflected in their occupations and consequently in the kind of vocational instructions which is needed by them.

"In emphasizing vocational training I am not forgetting or belittling the importance of cultural training. Every mechanic deserves and needs enough of cultural training to enable him to use his leisure time profitably and happily. The literary and more theoretical subjects must have attention. There should be no question of 'higher' or 'lower' studies. The only question should be, 'What does this or that student deserve and require to develop him most fully in capability and serviceableness?'"
