"Pigs in the Blankets"

"Will be with you noon train. Can stay over one night .- Bach." This was the telegram that Nelson Wright received at his office and instantly the dull day was transformed. He sprang to his feet briskly and snatched up the telephone receiver, calling in turn three close male friends who were favorite chums.

If there was anybody in the world whom Nelson particularly liked it was this electrifying "Bach." Joyfully he hailed one and each of his chums. "I've told you about Bach. Well, he'll be -By Touchstone in London Daily Mafl. here today, so hold yourself open for supper."

He had known Bach for two years When Nelson returned to his home town and put out his shingle as a budding attorney he had kept up a regular correspondence with this prince of good fellows. He had known that Bach was off on a jaunt for a month and was duly delighted to learn that on his way home he would stop over at Springdale.

"Bless the better sex!" he was wont to observe chivalrously, "but none in my blasted life. Think of it, fellows; from ten to sixteen the special victim of a parsimonious step-mother whose cooking was sparse as was it sloppy. I recall mackerel every day drowned In a greasy gravy that even the flies wouldn't touch. Evenings, inevitable and unvaried yellow corn meal and molasses. After my father's death I was relegated to an aged aunt. Poor soul! She did her best but she had no more appetite than a bird and forgot that I had one. I was literally starved to death. At nineteen I was alone in the world and thrown upon that desolate rock of refuge, a cheap boarding house. Do you wonder, when I made a lucky hit in business and had the means to do as I liked I eschewed cooks and became fastidious as to cookery? True, there are some meals to be had for a small fortune, but give me my own frying pan at my own fireside and I am content."

try," explained Lorena, and Verne somehow was glad to protract his stay. When a puzzling new dish was set on the table the next evening he dispatched his share with all the appreclation of a delighted connoisseur.

"I never enjoyed such a refection!" he insisted enthusiastically. "What is it, Miss Wright?"

"Pig in blankets they call it," explained Lorena. "Shall I give you the recipe? It is somewhat elaborate. You wash some oysters and roll them up in thin strips of bacon and skewer them with a small toothpick, sprinkle over. pepper, dip in melted butter, broil on hot toast, garnish with lemon and white celery, and there you are." Two weeks later Verne Dayton reappeared at Springdale. Of course Nelson invited him up to the house. "Miss Wright," said Verne, "no one can follow out that recipe like you. I simply had to come back to try another feast of those 'pigs.' " And later out of hearing of others as he supposed, Verne remarked to Nelson: "What I've really come for is to get better acquainted with a pretty girl and a perfect cook."

Grateful Enjoyment.

Suffering is not necessarily a blessing in disguise. Sometimes it is simply an undisguised evil, an evil that we have no right to be carying about with us. Self-denial for its own sake is only a foolish refusal of pleasures that we might thankfully enjoy. Courage and faith when trouble comes are no more our duty than is grateful enjoyment of our blessings when the days are bright.

First Aero Mail Service.

The first regular aero mail service in the world was started by the United States government, May 15, 1918, between New York and Washington. The actual flying time made was three hours and twenty minutes, including six minutes' stop for relaying at Philadelphia. At that time the fastest railroad train record between the two cities was five hours. The airship time has since been reduced to two hours and thirty minutes.

"Cobbler's Dozen."

While in most countries thirteen is always spoken of as "the baker's dozen," in Italy it is called "the cobbler's dozen." There is a tradition in Italy that formerly there was a law compelling collers to put twelve nails round the edge of a boot heel, and that when nails were cheap, a thirteenth nail was driven in the center for luck.

Sponge Resembles Plant.

Seen alive in its natural surroundings at the bottom of the sea, the sponge looks like a small plant. Sponging is an old industry in Nassau. Most of the "harvest of the sea" in pre-war days was shipped to the great sponge-markets of Europe-London and Paris. New York also came in for ts share.
