The Douglass Debating society held its regular weekly meeting last Saturday evening at the Community club. Mr. Bullock, the new sponsor, gave an interesting and encouraging talk to the members after which a spirited debate was held. The question was: Resolved, That the soldiers should receive a $50 bonus. The affirmative was upheld by James Pegg and Worthington Williams, the negative by John Pegg and Gerald Edwards. The affirmative won by a two to one vote. The society is still open to all young men of good character desiring to learn how to debate and speak in public.
