The Strike of the Colored Waiters at The Omaha Athletic Club

Late in September, 1915, eleven Omaha waiters, who depended largely upon extra work in hotels, met and decided upon unity, and they refused to affiliate with organized labor because of the following points:

1. There was a local union of white waiters in Omaha who refused to admit colored waiters or work with them.

2. Any hotel where white union waiters worked, colored men were not employed.

3. Whatever meant success for white waiters was failure for the colored and vice versa.

Their interest was antagonistic and competitive from the outset, and affiliation could only be a mockery so pronounced as to be an insult to the intelligence of well-thinking men.

The following May, 1916, they organized the Waiters' Protective and Employment Association, with headquarters and meeting rooms at the Warden hotel, 817 North Sixteenth street. Their membership increased rapidly and their officers were enthusiastic. Where men had worked extra for regular men's pay, they now demand and receive $3 per day. Men formerly receiving 50 cents a meal at the Commercial Club asked for and received -1 per meal.

The association furnished the Blackstone hotel with its first colored crew, who displaced the white crew. When the Athletic Club was built, Mr. Gray, the prospective head waiter, consulted the association three consecutive times, this being the strongest organization of colored waiters of Omaha and Lincoln at that time. The terms under which the Athletic club was to handle its waiters were arranged at these meetings. With the highest wages, best working conditions and more choice of employment than any other city in the country, Omaha soon became the haven of colored waiters.

Every request made by them of their employers was readily conceded. Why? Because they were a recognized power. The result of this was that they became imbued with such a feeling of security that since October, 1920, they have discussed the advisability of disbanding the association, and the climax came at their mass meeting on January 15, 1921, when some of the members decided that the services of the association were no longer necessary and less than fifty days after they had decided to disband their organization, leaving the obligations on the shoulders of its officers, the Athletic Club decided to cut the waiters' wages. Consequently the waiters walked out March 6. Who will fight their battles now?

The officers of this association are anxious to imitate our Savior and we say like him, "Thou who sin seven times seventy and then some you are yet our brethren and we will forgive you." You cannot win this fight alone, so let us win it together. If the Athletic Club beats you in this, the hotels and railroads will do likewise, and so we advise you to call at our headquarters, rooms 2 and 4, Kaffir block (Tyler 1990), and reinstate yourselves before it is too late.

E. L. ELLIS, President.

F. K. STONE, Secretary-Treasurer.

BETHEL A. M. E. CHURCH

Council Bluffs, Ia.

The Stewardess' Board and Willing Workers, auxiliaries of Bethel A. M. E. church of this city, presented their pastor, Rev. J. P. Sims, B. D., as a birthday gift, a box of fine shirts and many other things. Mrs. Richardson, president of the Stewardess' Board, and Mrs. Hawthorne, on behalf of the Willing Workers, presented the gifts.

While all were merry and happy, in walked Mr. Blake with a large bucket of ice cream. The table was prepared and we sat down and enjoyed ourselves to the full. The pastor and wife invite you to come again March 9, 1922, or sooner if it be possible.

The Rev. and Mrs. J. P. Sims were on the sick list, but they are about now. This was fine and restoring medicine. They recommend it to other pastors.

The second quarterly meeting of Bethel A. M. E. church will be held April 3 instead of March 27. Rev. P. M. Lewis of Sioux City, Ia., will officiate instead of Rev. T. B. Stovall, P. E.

The Church Aid gave a tackey party March 10. It was a grand success. Mrs. Payne and Mrs. Herndon made things go.
