BEAR PLAYFUL HOLD-UP MAN

Bruin Most Interesting Thing in Yellowstone Park, Says Big Game Hunter.

BOSS OF SUMMER TOURISTS

A Geyser is Only a Geyser, but a Bear is a Humorist, Says Edmund Heller—Big Game is Increasing Rapidly.

New York.—The bear as a playful hold-up man who rifles tourists' automobiles and breaks into hotels for food is one of the uncertain quantities of Yellowstone park, says Edmund Heller, the big game hunter, who has just returned from several months in the park studying the wild life of larger animals for the Roosevelt wild life experiment station connected with the school of forestry at Syracuse university.

Mr. Heller likes bears. He has spent hours watching and photographing them during the past summer, and thinks they are by far the most interesting things in the park, more so than the geysers and hot springs. A geyser is only a geyser after you have seen it a few times, says Mr. Heller, but a bear is a source of infinite humor to those who study him.

Big game in the park is increasing, with the exception of mountain sheep and antelope, he says. Much of his report will be devoted to methods of preventing the graceful sheep and antelope from disappearing altogether from the Yellowstone. It is not their natural habitat, for in winter, unless restricted, they would move south into the Dakotas, he says. As it is they stay in the park, many freezing to death. On the other hand, moose are increasing rapidly, and elk are so numerous that they can be heard bugling all day long as they charge across the bottoms. They number at least 10,000. Mr. Heller said he frequently saw large herds with bulls driving their cows and trumpeting defiance at the world. Mule deer are also increasing fast, and beavers fill the streams, he says.

Increase in Tourists. The greatest change in the Yellowstone in the last few years, however, is in the greatly increased number of tourists, according to Mr. Heller. The automobile and the war are both largely responsible, although, oddly enough, most of the tourists are Westerners, to whom wild country is no novelty. The park is filled with camps at which automobile parties may stop for the night under the supervision of a ranger to see that they do not fire the woods.

The bears are a constant source of interest to these tourists. If cars are left a moment a fat, black bear may soon be found pawing the seat and upholstery to pieces in search of food. The bears are fairly tame, because they are never molested, but they are wild enough to claw the tourist who tries to drive them off with nothing more than temper and a stick.

"The rangers really have to protect the bears from tourists," says Mr. Heller, "because the animals flock around the hotels for food." Occasionally a tourist gets tangled up with one so badly that the bear has to be shot. Now the bears have regular feeding places where the waste from the hotels is dumped. The tourist watches from behind a screen with a ranger looking on with a rifle to protect both the tourist and the bears. "They come loping in at regular hours, often a mother bear bringing her cubs. She will put the cubs up a tree and tell them to stay there. If they come down while she is feeding, she runs back and cuffs them into the tree again, just like naughty children. Bears often go back after a meal, climb a tree in full view of people and go to sleep.

Bears Are Funny. "They are funny things. They walk like a man when they stand up. When they are in a tree they often sit like a man, with legs dangling on each side of a branch and clutching the trunk in front of them. They often break into hotels. Big logs will baffle them, but any ordinary house with clapboards or square corners which they can get hold of they rip open with a few pulls from their powerful paws. "One bear followed me around for days, trotting at my heels like a dog. We called him 'the kodak bear.' He was as tame as a kitten. They are dangerous for persons who don't know how to treat them, however. There are about 60 grizzlies in the park now, although they are not seen so often as the others and, of course, are more dangerous. You should see the black and cinnamon bears run when a grizzly comes up to the feeding place behind the hotel. They scatter in every direction and take to the trees, for a grizzly, although he can run like a horse, can't climb trees.

"The deer and elk also come up to the houses to be fed, and sometimes deer can be fed from the hand. One old elk is called 'Ash-Can Pete' because when he comes looking for food he goes around tipping over all the ash cans. He had been there for years. Everybody knows him." The buffaloes, which seemed in danger of extermination a few years ago, are now increasing so rapidly that there are two large herds of them in the park, says Mr. Heller.

MAKE DOUGHNUT LIGHT AND RICH

Results of Series of Experiments Made by Department of Agriculture Specialists.

THINGS TO DO TO AVOID FAT

Do Not Be Too Lavish in Use of Butter, Sugar and Eggs—Testing Temperature With Thermometer is Excellent Plan.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) If you are fond of doughnuts, but find those you make at home become soaked with fat while frying, the following suggestions may be of help. They are the result of a long series of experiments in the absorption of fat by fried batters and doughs carried on in the experimental kitchen of the United States Department of Agriculture. A rich dough always absorbs more fat in frying than a plainer mixture. Unless you wish your doughnuts to be excessively rich, do not be too lavish with butter, sugar, and eggs. The following recipe makes doughnuts which, if properly fried, are not so excessively rich as to be a menace to digestion.

Plain Doughnuts. 1 cupful sugar, 1/2 cupful butter (level 1 tablespoonful but- measurement), 2 eggs, 1 teaspoonful salt, 1 cupful milk, 1/2 cupful flour, 1/4 teaspoonful nutmeg. A very soft dough absorbs more fat than a stiffer mixture, was another fact found through these experiments. Too much flour, however, makes a doughnut that is not so light and fluffy as is desirable. The addition of hot rice potatoes to the mixture makes a doughnut that is light and fluffy, but at the same time does not absorb much fat. Doughnuts made by this recipe are delicious when fresh, but also keep well.

A Wife Plunger That Will Keep Doughnuts Under Fat Enables You to Fry Doughnuts in Half the Time and the Result is Better.

Potato Doughnuts. 1/2 cupful of sugar, 1/2 tablespoonful butter, 2 eggs, 1/2 cupful hot rice potatoes, 2-3 cupful milk, 1/4 cupful flour. Fry your doughnuts no longer than necessary. Frying doughnuts in fat that is not hot enough, or rolling and cutting them so that they are too thick to cook through in a short time, or failure on the part of the cook to judge when they are done, or any other cause that keeps them in the fat too long, tends to make them greasy. Testing the temperature of the fat with a thermometer is the best method in frying doughnuts. Other methods, though sometimes successful, are uncertain. A temperature of 185 degrees Centigrade, or 365 degrees Fahrenheit, has been found satisfactory. Doughnuts rolled about 1/4 inch thick can usually be fried in 3 minutes at this temperature if they are turned to make them brown evenly; or they may be fried in 1 1/2 minutes if forced under the surface of the fat during frying.

Frying With a Basket. It was found that the use of some device to force the doughnuts under the surface of the fat was the most satisfactory method of frying. An ordinary wire frying basket, with a ball and slightly smaller in diameter than the frying kettle, can be used. When the doughnuts first rise to the surface of the fat, lower the empty basket over them under the surface of the fat. Doughnuts fried by this method absorb less fat, brown evenly, and are much less apt to crack than when turned in frying. The basket can be used for draining the doughnuts after they are removed from the fat.

If your nose is oily or shiny, bathe it nightly with borax water or wash with cornmeal instead of soap. After a few minutes rice powder or powdered starch should be applied.

Double Purpose of Salads. Salads serve a double purpose. They are tempting to the appetite and they aid digestion. No dinner, however good, is complete without a salad.
