THAT WOULD BE ALL RIGHT

Indian Servant Thought He Saw Way of Getting Around the Missionary's Scruples.

Margaret L. O'Brien, secretary of the Domestic Servant's league, said in an address in Chicago:

"If a servant is a hard worker she has a right to brag about it. The thing, however, shouldn't be carried too far.

"A missionary in India was waited on by a stately Indian, an applicant for the post of cook. The interview was satisfactory, and the missionary said at the end:

"I guess I'll engage you. By the way, though, what's your religion?"

"Beg pardon, sar," said the Indian, "I am heathen."

"Heathen? What do you mean by that?" said the missionary.

"Beg pardon, sar, am worshiper of sticks and stones."

"My gracious," said the missionary, "I'm afraid I can't employ such a character as that."

"Beg pardon, sar," said the Indian, "for thy dear sake work so d-n hard no time to worship anything."—Detroit Free Press.

"Full House" Likely to Be the Least That Father of Quintet Would Remark.

A social worker attending the re-convention in Indianapolis of the Indiana Tuberculosis association told this one:

A Sunday school teacher had been asked by one of her pupils what word was used in referring to two children born at the same time.

"Twins," the teacher answered.

"What is the term used in referring to three babies born at the same time?" was the next inquiry.

"They are triplets," she replied.

"How do you refer to four babies?" another asked.

"Four babies are called quadruplets."

A bright, flaxen-haired youth, probably thinking to catch the teacher, asked the term for five children.

Before the teacher had time to respond, a red-headed little fellow, the Peck's had boy of the class, answered:

"Gee, that's a full house."—Indianapolis News.

A Time for All Things. "Folks like Polk Sawney, that runs the store at the crossroads, hain't overrid with enterprise," commented a citizen of Fiddle Creek, Ark.

"Tuther day, trinstance, I went there in the middle of the afternoon to buy a little something, talk a few politics, and so forth. When I sa'ntered in nobody was in sight on the place. But after I'd tramped around for a spell a sleepy voice from under the counter sorter snarled:

"If you're a drummer than aims to sell me something, I don't want it; and if you're a customer that is figuring on buying something, why in fury can't you just as well come around some time when I hain't plumb y-aw-w-w-ore out?"—Kansas City Star.

Artisans Who Love Beauty. In Lafayette, Ind., the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paper-hangers has issued a brochure descriptive of their four-story office building erected in that city. The building is in the Italian style of architecture—peculiarly appropriate for the home of an organization interested in the decorative arts. It is stated that the "color effects attained in the building are evidence that this age has developed not only marvelous materials to work with, but the artistic genius to put these materials together beautifully."

Deserved Reward. "You raised the salary of that new reporter of yours?"

"I certainly did," replied the editor, "although he had been working for me less than a week."

"He must have shown conspicuous ability."

"Yes, I sent him out to 'cover' a trial where the defendant was represented by a woman lawyer. He wrote a column about the case and never once referred to her as Fortia."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Unreasonably Sensitive! Speaking of touchy persons, the superintendent of a department in a city factory was asked the meaning of "sensitive" by a foreign workman who broke his English as he spoke it.

"Well," said the superintendent, "a sensitive man is one whose feelings are hurt easily. Why do you want to know?"

"The boss," said the workman, "he ask me not to call John a baldhead boob because he's sensitive."

Rather Unwrapped. Otto Kahn, the New York financier, objects to the modern girl's bathing attire—a maillot or one-piece suit, no skirt, no stockings.

"Look there!" he said one morning at Coronado, as a very pretty girl in a black silk maillot ran down the beach. "You could never say that girl had a rapt look now, could you?"
