BELL CALLS PRESIDENT'S GARDENERS TO DAILY TASK

CHANGES IN HATS

Headgear is Wider and Broader for Fall and Winter.

No Longer Crushes Into Shape—Built Upon Frames That Stand Away From the Head.

The first demand of every woman for the new season's fashion is that her hats shall be in fine trim—that she shall adorn her head according to the latest dictates of style.

Now the hats of the present season have changed just as much as the frocks. They are wider and broader. They no longer crush into shape, but are built upon frames that stand away from the head and create a formality of line entirely new.

From Paris comes the news that the tricorne will be more popular than ever. But it is a very much elaborated tricorne. It is larger than it has been for some time. It spreads out on three sides with the abandon that only a hat of French origin can show.

As for the felt hats, they are no more numerous than the straw hats were in the summer. There are silk and satin hats and duvetyn hats and velvet hats, but felt hats, those real exponents of the winter mode, are much in the minority. However, they are smarter this season than they ever have been before.

gather, you will find the felt hats usurping the center of the stage.

They are blocked into interesting shapes, usually with puffed and draped crowns, and they are made with narrow brims, sometimes wider at the sides, that droop over the faces and give a mushroom effect to the general contour of the hat.

FLAT CREPE IS NEW FABRIC

Nome, Beautiful Silk of Compact Texture and Fine Quality—Offered in All Shades.

With the establishment of a new silhouette it is only natural that a new fabric should also gain favor, for in the expression of a decided vogue an adaptable material is always of paramount importance.

Nome, a new flat crepe, is a beautiful silk of a compact texture and fine quality. It has the sort of almost noncrushable characteristic that distinguishes materials that are all pure silk and that is such a decided asset in a fabric of its weight.

The vogue for this flat silk is based on many apparent reasons. In the development of the circular and draped silhouette the grace and folds of the design are most appreciated in a fabric that catches the light on its many surfaces.

Autumn Colors. Brown and navy are among the most favored colors for street costumes. Evening dresses show the tendency toward shades of yellow, rose and sapphire and feature a low-cut neckline, much draping and no sleeves.

THE TRODDEN WAY

THE Brook through turmoil finds the Sea. In stress of Tempest grows the Tree. Before the golden harvest yields The harrow scars the patient fields. So why should you and I complain. If we must walk the path of pain Ever we achieve the distant peak Where lie the treasures that we seek?
