Rare Specimens of the Jeweler's Art Feature Engraved Gold and Silver and Leather.

Two rare specimens of the jeweler's art in bag making which have been imported to this country are of the satchel type. One has a mounting of chiseled silver, the bag itself being of silver gray doeskin. The other, which is made of black undressed kid, has a platinum mounting set with sapphires and rhinestones. There is an embroidered design decorating one side of the bag with certain parts being painted in sapphire blue to match the blue of the sapphire in the mounting.

The most skilled workers in the leather industry are now busily embossing, carving, painting by hand and ornamenting with metal and stones the most finely dyed and finished leathers. Mountings of solid gold, gold washed silver and platinum continue to be favorites for the flat leather purse and card case. To give variety these metal pieces, which are hammered on as borders astride the edges of leather, are sometimes skillfully engraved. Hand carving and embossing and hand painting add a fur ther variety to leathers which enter into the makeup of bags.

Homespun Suit.

For fall wear an exceptionally attractive suit is of blue homespun collared with fitch. Its straight box coat and beautifully cut skirt are distinctive and vastly different from the commonplace models of the early

The three-piece suit promises to be the piece de resistance of the winter's fashions, but it is possibly a little early for that variety of costume. Since the dress is of heavy material and the coat is of that same fabric, the chances are that the gown as a whole will be too heavy to serve through the fall months. However, when the time does come for its adoption, it will be found to have more of a place in the sun than it had

GOOD FORM IN DRESS

YOU may have read recently of a clergyman who sent a bride home from church because of what he considered the immodesty of her dress, and another well known divine assured the women of his parish that he would have them refused admittance to church, if they came clad in the extremes of fashion.

Whether the styles of dress that these priests referred to were actually immodest doubtless depends on the point of view. But that they were inappropriate to church is unquestionable. To be dressed always in good taste does not necessarily mean that you must never indulge in the more extreme forms of the fashion, but that you should wear them never where they might give offense. For instance it is now in most localities perfectly customary for women young and old to wear low necks and short sleeves at evening entertainments. In fact in this country young, unmarried girls habitually wear lower evening gowns than their mothers-though among well bred French women, unmarried girls are not so privileged.

Now since this is customary it is not in bad taste, because it attracts no undue attention and causes no mis-

The same thing holds true in regard to bathing costumes. Had women worn the sort of bathing suits that they do now ten or twenty years ago, beaches. But times have changed and less the tightly laced, exaggerated figure of two decades ago would give more offense to the modern taste than tumes. It is all a question of what we Back came the answer to the effect that it help of a neighbor she is learning to was a distinctive cow and had always had a decided liking for distinctive paper. The claim was paid.

Something to Think About By F. A. WALKER

GIVE THE BEST

TO GET the best from life you must give the best.

In whatever position you may be, there should be no reluctance to make a fair exchange in which measure for measure is given on both sides in absolute sincerity.

That you should make a fashion of doing this encourages others who are taking note of you to do likewise.

They find through experience that there comes with continued actions of this kind an inexpressible gladness which fills their hearts with friendship and lightens their countenances with sunny complacency,

There are no pleasurable experiences of this sort felt by those who are constantly complaining about the short-comings of others, forgetful all the while of their own.

You cannot feel the balmy air of spring mornings unless you go forth into the glorious outdoors and become a part of it, nor can you give to others if you have nothing to give.

That you should waste your days in ignorance of this fundamental truth underlying happiness is a deplorable error, which, as the years pass softly over you, graying your hairs and marking little lines upon your face, often becomes a burden almost too heavy for self-respect.

You cannot have the best without divorcing from your heart all forms of selfishness, egotism, jealousy, covetousness, doubt and pride,

Your kit of fine sentiments may be packed to the top, but unless you shall stoop, open the bag, take out each sentiment one by one and use them as a plumber uses his tools in daily life the opportunity to get the best in life will never come to you.

Like diamonds, such inspirations must be cut and polished to bring out their beauty, brilliancy and worth. High-born ideas, unless put to use at their birth, soon become rusty and of no value. In your privacy you may fondle them and dream of the wonderful things you intend to do, but if you replace them time and again in the old worn bundle vithout attempting to test their value in noble work you are not making an effort to get the best, or even a portion of the best, waiting anywhere for every man and woman willing to sacrifice, help others and give the best within them.

LIFE

A LITTLE grief, and much of joy Marks every day. A wealth of love without alloy,

Along life's way. A little toil, a little pain, The glint of sun, the welcome rain,

And then comes night. A peaceful rest at set of sun, A welcome home when work is done,

And life's all right. A time to meet, a time to part; Friends come and go.

Hand clasping hand, heart beats to heart, Comes joy, comes woe.

The radiant light of clear blue skies, The welcome gleam of children's eyes, Make hearts grow light. A battle won for those loved best,

And troubles, faced with merry jest, And life's all right. (Copyright)

There is a clever trick among French women of wearing one earring -a long one-dangling down over the shoulder, and the other ear without Pearl tassels are favorite earrings.

Of course, the idea is to have ear rings for each costume, and sometimes women have more than one pair for a favorite frock. These harmonize in color and design with both the frocks with which they are to be Brilliant Buttonry.

Buttons of wood, brilliantly handpainted, lend the needed touch of color to some of the new frocks, wraps and blouses. Originality finds expression in accessories of attire this season, as never before. ACME HAIR GROWER has done for them.

Omaha, Neb., Sept. 18, 1922. Enough can not be said of Madam E. Hackley Lawson's wonderful Hair Grower. I was very much discouraged with the many hair oils until better than one year ago I began Madam Lawson's treatment which has proven a success, for my hair was then three inches long and breaking harsh and falling with an itching scalp. But ow I have an abundant growth of hair, ten inches long, with a healthful scalp, owing to the wonderful Acme Hair Grower.—MRS. A. BALDWIN, 2225 North 26th Street.
