Origin of Wrongful Things.
It may be safe to assert that half the wrong things men do—taking an average of human action, half at least—are done not in despite of conscience, but with its dubious consent, when the first clear decision has been set aside.—Rev. Robert A. Watson, D. D.

Those Mad Wags.
"I note by an exchange," writes J. B., "that a Mr. Vowel has just died. Let us be thankful that it was neither 'u' nor 'i'."—Boston Evening Transcript.

High Ambition.
What's brave, what's noble, let's do it after the high Roman fashion, and make death proud to take us.—Shakespeare.

Hard to Keep.
A woman rarely puts off till tomorrow what she can say today.—Boston Transcript.

Blamed Airplane.
Seeing the new moon, a little fellow said: "Gratias, what's the matter with the moon? Did an airplane knock a piece out of it?"

Ob, that estate, degrees and offices were not desired, courtship, and that merit of the waiter.—Shakespeare.

Oldest City of Manikind.

Blamed Airplane.
