

SHORT SMILES

Which?

Bob—"How old would you say she is?" Bill—"To her face or behind her back?"

Equivalent

"Our new neighbors have no male." "That's nothing against them. They have two cars."

The Compleat Angler

Passer-by—Hey! You've got a bite! Fisherman—I know it. I'm prolonging the thrill.—From Life.

A Good Habit

"Is he married?" "I don't know. He's a reserved sort of chap—keeps all his troubles to himself."

Canned

"What's the matter with you?" "I wrote an article on fresh milk and the editor condensed it."

The Prize

May—"She had a lively race for a husband." Sue—"Yes. I heard she married a run-down nobleman."

In Keeping

"These love poems are very short." "What can you expect? Nowadays a courtship doesn't last very long."

Inference

Visitor—"Listen, Jimmie, I hear a cuckoo." Jimmie—"Gee, it must have escaped from a clock."—From Life.

ORACULAR WRITINGS REMAIN A MYSTERY

The Sibylline books were a collection of oracular writings in three volumes, said to have contained the fortunes of the ancient Roman date. According to tradition they were purchased by Tarquinius Superbus from the Cumaean Sibyl, and deposited in the temple of Jupiter Capitolinus at Rome in a stone chest, underground. They were guarded by certain officers, at first two in number, but afterward increased successively to ten and fifteen. The Sibylline books were not open to public inspection, but were consulted only by those in charge of the senate, at the special command of the senate. Whether they contained predictions or merely directions for propitiating the gods is difficult to determine in consequence of the mystery that enveloped them. They were destroyed by the burning of the temple in 82 B. C., but a fresh collection was made and deposited in the same building when rebuilt. In 12 B. C. the Sibylline books were transferred by Emperor Augustus to the temple of Apollo on the Palatine hill, where they remained until publicly burned by Stilicho, between 404 and 408 A. D.

Many Religions at College

Twenty-five religious denominations are represented among the students of the Pennsylvania State college. Of more than 3,000 students who stated their religious preferences recently about one-fourth were Presbyterians, one-fifth Methodists, one-eighth Lutherans and one-tenth Roman Catholics, says School Life. Other sects represented are: Reformed, Protestant Episcopal, Baptist, Hebrew, Evangelical, United Presbyterian, United Brethren, Society of Friends, Church of Christ, Congregational, Dunkard, Christian Science, Moravian, Unitarian, Mennonite, Universalist, Greek Catholic, Disciple, Schwenkfelder and United Zion Children, the last three having but one representative each.

HARD TO ASSOCIATE JOB AND THE TURKEY.

Probably the most remarkable thing about the proverbial Job's turkey is the fact that Job never had a turkey. This bird, which belongs to the pheasant family, was erroneously thought by the early settlers in this country to have come from Turkey and the fowl was named accordingly. But the turkey was a native of America and Europeans never heard of it until the New world was discovered by Columbus thousands of years after Job, the richest man in all the East, was gathered to his fathers. The phrase "poor as Job's turkey" is supposed to be of American origin. It probably originated in an old book entitled "Sam Slick" by the American-Canadian jurist and author, Thomas C. Halliburton. In this book a turkey gobbler is described as being so poor that he had only one feather in his tail, and so weak that he had to lean against a fence to gobble. The turkey's emaciated condition was ascribed to his persistent efforts to hatch out chicks from eggs which didn't have any chicks in them. But just how Job became associated with the turkey has never been determined.—Pathfinder Magazine.

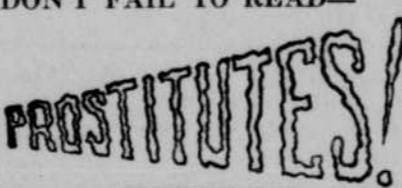

Cat and Radio

One of the radio fans of Augusta, Maine, has to share his radio concert each night with the family cat, as Sir Pussy insists upon listening in. Music and bedtime stories and oratory are all the same to the cat, and he listens with rapt attention to everything that is on the air. Sometimes the high plaintive wailing of a violin will make the cat uneasy, but not to the extent of causing him to leave his reserved seat in the chair near the set.

Light Church Bells

The village of Allraht, near Cologne, Germany, boasts of the first church bells made of alloy of aluminum and copper. Their weight being only one-third of the traditional bronze bells, the superstructures of the steeples may be built more lightly and inexpensively. Furthermore, there is no danger of the hursting or rusting of bells made of aluminum.
