Epidemics Since 1914 Deadlier Than Wars

Washington.—Epidemics, with a toll of 40,000,000, have claimed more lives throughout the world since 1914 than all the wars and civil strife, since that year, the second Pan-American Red Cross conference was told by T. B. Kitteridge, assistant director general of the League of Red Cross Societies.

Of the 62,000,000 lives lost in world disasters since 1914, Mr. Kitteridge said 9,000,000 were lost in war and 5,000,000 in civil strife. Injuries during the same period totaled 140,000,000. Epidemics caused 100,000,000 of those and war 20,000,000. The number of dead and seriously injured in disasters since 1914 constituted one-tenth of the total world population.

Eighty-five per cent of relief contributions for disaster-stricken areas come from the American continent, 75 per cent being from the United States.

Asserts All Lincoln Relics Are Collected

Springfield, Ill.—Half a century of activities of collectors of Lincoln relics and papers has cleaned out the last vestiges of Lincolniana, J. C. Thompson, former judge and lay-historian here, says.

Mr. Thompson, who has had experience as a student of Illinois history and particularly that relating to Lincoln, says he refuses to be disturbed by reports of new Lincoln discoveries. "Washington's bodyguard," he said "was a long time in dying and it will be the same with Lincoln. The collections of some 500 Lincoln enthusiasts and various museums have garnered practically everything that ever related to the emancipator or his life."

Call It "Bifteck"

Paris.—Do you know what "bifteck" is? It appears on the bill of fare of all restaurants in France, morning and evening. The French imagine it to be the English for beefsteak, but it covers all shades of steak.
