MONTE BLUE
Monte Blue, featured in "So This Is Paris", the Lubitsch production for Warner Bros., coming to the Lake theatre on Thursday and Friday, September 16-17, was born in Indianapolis, Ind., in 1890 and educated at Purdue university. After a life of adventure, as railroad fireman, cowboy, sailor, soldier, carpenter and athlete, he became an extra for D. W. Griffith and began the screen career which has brought him success and fame. Although at first identified with outdoor roles, he has been equally adept with sophisticated characterizations. Among his best known Warner pictures were "The Marriage Circle," "Kiss Me Again," "The Limited Mail," "Red Hot Tires," "Hogan's Alley" and "The Man Upstairs." In "So This Is Paris," Mr. Blue is once more cast as the gay Parisian husband, who gets a sudden mad thought and lets it flicker until it blazes into a whirlwind flame of ludicrous misadventure. Incidentally, Mr. Blue dances a Charleston in this picture that reveals new talent, located in his knees and toes.
