A UNIQUE HALLOWE'EN PARTY

A very unique Hallowe'en party was given Thursday, October 28, by Mrs. Ruby Webster and Alberta Richardson at 976 North Twenty-fifth street. Twenty-four guests were present. Coming into the spacious yard, the guests were confronted by a skeleton bearing directions to the entrance, which was in the basement. After wandering in darkness they were admitted by three raps into a dimly-lighted "den" infested with bats, witches, garlands and other Hallowe'en decorations, where games and fortunes were enjoyed by all.

The feature of the party was a "treasure hunt." Each guest was given a candle and envelope with directions which lead them into the yard where signs lighted by jack-o'-lanterns kept them going to various places, lastly to the witches cauldron, where a cap concealed in orange and black paper was given each with instructions to return to the den. Returning to the den, four tables artistically decorated with place cards and other favors awaited all. A very delicious repast was then served.

Another feature was the music for dancing which was furnished by the mellow strains of ukuleles and a guitar.

"HELLO PAREE"

"Hello Paree," promises to be a rather novel entertainment, inasmuch as while it has all the indications of a musical comedy, it also has many of the elements incorporated in what might be termed polite vaudeville. The author has written a fragile theme about a party of tourists who visit that section of the world where the stamp of worth is only regulated by the size of the pocketbook, and the mythical citizen goes around attired in a smock and velvet hat; this he calls "Hello Paree" and injects a lot of very catchy songs, some exceedingly clever dialogue; interpolates several meritorious specialties, introduces a very good cast, and presents sixteen of as attractive singing and dancing girls as have appeared upon the local stage this season. It is here at the Gayety theatre commencing Sunday matinee.
