Thrift Aid to Courage

Thriftlessness often fosters cowardice. Thrift inspires courage. Shiftless persons rarely have much backbone. They are so dependent upon others for assistance that often they cannot assert themselves to preserve their self-respect. Their wasteful habits sap their self-reliance, their self-assurance. The thrifty individual, of the other hand, has learned to stand on his own feet. He has learned how to take care of himself, how to manage his affairs, how to provide against emergencies. Therefore, he is little inclined to submit to uncalled for indignities. Nor is he afraid to take reasonable risks. His financial backing gives him courage. And without courage few successful careers have been built up. Thus we arrive at this formula: Thrift develops success.—Forbes Magazine.

Kin to a Mysterious Race

So long ago that it is impossible to say when, there dwelt in Europe or Asia a most remarkable tribe of mankind. These people are not mentioned in any ancient history and no legend gives a hint of their existence. They were the so-called fathers of the Aryans who now people the earth, and the knowledge we have learned about them has been learned through the study of words. Word by word the language of the original Aryans has been exhumed from the decadent modern languages until, pieced together, they tell the story of a vanished people. Historians tell us that words and customs are a great index to the life of any race.—Capper's Weekly.

Crashing the Gate

A young son came to his mother one day carrying an invitation to a children's party to be given by one of the mothers in the neighborhood. As it carried an R. S. V. P. the mother at once dispatched an acceptance for her son. The boy attended the party as planned and some time afterward the mother asked him where the envelope was in which his invitation had come. The son replied: "Oh, I didn't get my envelope. I traded a marble for an invitation."

Her Idea of It

"How much for this little spool of silk?" asked Audrey, who was shopping in a neighborhood store. "Twenty cents? That is about twice what I usually pay." "But most of the silkworms died last year," said the proprietor. "I suppose if I wanted a roll of tape most of the tapeworms would up and lie, too?" Thereupon the astute little girl looked dignifiedly out.—Kansas City.

Dinosaur "Revamped"

One of the world's largest dinosaurs (ornieria), which died about 30,000,000 years ago, is to be put on its legs again at the Natural History museum north Kensington, England. The ornieria lived in the estuaries of rivers, laid eggs, and ate floating vegetation. It was about 50 feet long and 30 feet high, and weighed something like ten tons. Its bones were found in Tanganyika.

Schoolboy "Howlers"

Extracts from written answers to English schoolboys' examination papers: "The Nile is the only remarkable river in the world. It was discovered by Doctor Livingstone, and it rises in Mungo Park." "Constantinople is on the Golden horn, a strong fortress, has a university, and was the residence of Peter the Great. Its chief building is the Sublime Port. Cyprus came into our possession in 878, and was given to Lord Beaconsfield." "Julius Caesar invaded Britain in 55 B. C. The condition of the Britons was in a rude state. The people lived in huts made of straw, and the women wore their hair down the backs with torches in their hands."

NOTICE

Mrs. J. Julian Walker, now of Memphis, Tenn., has protested coming to Nebraska to live with me.

I take this method to inform the public that as her husband, I am not responsible for her.

All indications point to the fact that she has deserted me.

Signed:

DR. J. JULIAN WALKER.
