President Palma, in a Feeling Ad- dress, Tells How Deeply They Real- ize What United States Has Done for Them in Making Them Free.

The last vestige of the American occupation of Cuba disappeared Thursday when the American flag was lowered from the Havana barracks and the first battalion of American soldiers marched to the Triscornia pier and boarded the United States army transport Sumner.

Standing on the plain near Cabana fortress, between a line of American and a line of Cuban troops, and surrounded by a crowd of Americans and Cubans, President Palma feelingly voiced his appreciation of all that the Americans have done for Cuba.

After the soldiers had presented arms, the American flag was slowly lowered from the staff over the barracks, a salute of twenty-one guns meanwhile being fired from the fortress. The Cuban flag was raised in its place and also saluted with twenty-one guns.

President Palma then addressed the minister Squiers and Maj. Brown, commander of the American troops, saying, in part:

"On this momentous occasion the sincerity and depth of my feelings overcome me, and my heart must supply my deficiency of words. We are confronted by one of the most extraordinary facts recorded in the annals of universal history, the departure from our shores of the last troops of the United States kept in Cuba after helping us to secure our independence and the blessings of freedom. They could stay longer, under any pretext whatever, or an unjust demand could be imposed upon us, but on the contrary, the government of the United States, identified as it is with the liberal spirit and noble character of the American people, willingly proves its disinterestedness and sincerity of the aid it rendered us by taking these men away and showing us at the same time that we have, as an independent people, the confidence of one of the most powerful nations on earth."

Maj. Brown replied to President Palma, and thanked him for his kindness to the American officers and soldiers.

After this reply all the troops marched past in platoon formation and boarded the Sumner.

GIRL CASHIER SAVES CASH.

Chicago Woman Puts Up a Plucky Fight Against Burglars.

While a dozen terrified witnesses in a woman's restaurant at 133 Michigan Avenue, Chicago, shrieked and fled from the leveled revolvers of two holdup men, Miss N. E. Sumner, the cashier, resisted the efforts of a third thief to open the cash register. Only when she had been struck several times and a revolver had been pressed against her head did the cashier give up.

The delay caused by her struggle frightened the trio and they fled, after seizing only the money in the register, amounting to about $80. Over $200 in bills had been placed on the desk near by, but had been swept to the floor by Miss Sumner, where they were found later.

TRAIN JUMPS TRACK.

Passenger Train Rolls Down Embankment

Two dead, two fatally and twenty-five seriously injured in the revised casualty list in the wreck of the intercolonial express train, the five cars of which left the rails at Hunter's Crossing, forty miles west of Halifax, N. S., Wednesday and plunged down a 30-foot embankment into the Shubenacadie River. Every one of the thirty passengers suffered more or less serious injuries, as did the ten members of the train crew.

The dead are Conductor Robert Duncan, Halifax, and Mr. John Glassey, Halifax. The injured are Baggage-master J. E. Blair, Halifax, and Armenian Armenian peddler, name not known.

The train, consisting of a locomotive, postal car, baggage car, two days coaches and a Pullman car, was bound from Halifax for Montreal and Boston, and was traveling fifty miles an hour when the accident occurred.

As the curve at Hunter's Crossing was reached Engineer Ross left a jolt, and looking back saw the baggage car swerve from the rails, followed by the coaches and the mail car. The five cars went over the embankment and rolled down into the river, which skirts the roadbed at this point.

The Pullman turned over twice. One of the coaches struck a tree and was ripped open from end to end. The other cars landed bottom up in the water, which, fortunately, was less than two feet deep.

Of the seriously injured many had broken limbs, but it is believed that none will die.

The accident is supposed to have resulted from some defect in the wheels of the truck of the car which first left the track. A broken rail was at first thought to have caused the wreck, but investigation showed that this was not the case.

The overturned cars carried down the telegraph wires, and communication between Hunter's Crossing and Halifax was not re-established for several hours. Traffic on the road was resumed at a late hour.

The dead are William A. Maxey and John J. Dunn.

The fire started in the six-story Phoenix building, on Gay Street, between Wall and Union Avenues, and the wholesale hat and millinery house of Murphy & Robinson. The flames spread rapidly both north and south, into the store of Cullen & Newman, wholesale chinaware, on the north, and into the store of M. L. Ross & Co. on the south.

On the south the fire did not make further progress, but on the north, after gutting the Cullen & Newman establishment, it spread to Cullen & Shields, chinaware, and the W. W. Woodruff Company, wholesale hardware and machinery house, which was entirely destroyed.

The fire was stopped before it had damaged M. B. Arnslett & Co., on the north, except slightly.

The firemen had three lines of hose on the Ross building, which is four stories high, when the walls of the Phoenix building crumbled and crashed through the roof of the Ross building. The floors were carried down in order, and out of seven men who were in the building only two were caught, although there are rumors that two spectators lost their lives.

The insurance on the losses amounts to about $300,000.

Shortage in Wheat Supply is Given as the Cause.

All of the twenty-one Minneapolis (Minn.) flour mills have shut down, but the millers say they expect to resume operations in three days. Shortage in the supply of wheat is the cause.

The reason given is that the railroads are blocked with loaded cars, and the only way in which the situation could be relieved was by shutting down for a few days. William Nation, convict at the Nebraska penitentiary at Lincoln, has set an example that will live as a record. Out on parole a month ago, he changed his name, wooed and won a pretty widow of Grand Island, and opened a fashionable cafe on Third Street in the city of Norfolk.

Being well bred and affable and accustomed to dressing well, Nation came readily to be liked by the business men and the women given to entertaining. The marriage strengthened his standing in the community, consequently it was a shock to the townspeople Friday when deputies from the penitentiary at Lincoln came to arrest him for violating a parole.

Nation was sent to the state bastille for three years after conviction for grand larceny. His release took place a few weeks ago when the sentence had about expired. One of the stipulations of a parole is that the convict shall not leave the capital city. Nation said he was not aware of this. He took his arrest philosophically. He said he was sorry his mistake brought about disclosure, as he was in a fair way to make a success.

A few days later, when they went to get the butter, it was gone, and no trace of it was to be found. The family thought that the butter had been taken by Indians. Two weeks ago a man was excavating on the farm near the spring and unearthed a stone jar. On investigation it was found to contain butter. The jar on being exposed to the air crumbled to pieces, leaving the butter intact. It was mostly outside, but yellow and of good color within. Only the kindness of the firemen and police officers Bentley, David and Overton, prevented a panic and doubtless saved many from injury. The fire started in the basement under the feet of G. A.
