GODDARD BOMB SEEN

VENERABLE JURIST CONFIRMS ORCHARD'S STORY.

Death Trap at His Gate—Justice Goddard on the Witness Stand Identifies Pieces, One by One, as They Are Handed to Him.

The state Wednesday made dramatic production and proof of the Goddard bomb, and besides offering further contributions to the testimony of Harry Orchard against William D. Haywood, secured a ruling under which a number of the denunciatory articles published in the Miners Magazine, official organ of the Western Federation of Miners, will be admitted in evidence.

To Justice Luther M. Goddard himself fell the task of telling the story of the finding and preservation for use as evidence of the bomb with which Orchard tried to kill him. His appearance on the stand added another to the many dramatic scenes and situations that have characterized the trial, and his testimony was clear and minutely circumstantial.

The veteran Colorado jurist testified that the first information that he received about the bomb came to him from Orchard's confession, which was shown to him at Denver on Feb. 13, 1906, by Detective McFarland. He at once returned to his home and in his garden discovered the screw-eyes which Orchard said he placed there. It was rusted and corroded by ten months' exposure.

LOVERS DIE TOGETHER.

Note Found by Bodies Indicates Suicide Agreement.

Lying clasped in death's embrace on the shore of Triangle lake, Belleville, Ill., the bodies of James Bullock and Miss Cora Miller were found late Wednesday afternoon. In the forehead of each was a bullet hole and the position of a revolver between the bodies indicated that Bullock had killed the young woman and then himself. A note signed by both briefly stated that they loved each other, but finding their love was hopeless had decided to die together.

Near by lay a razor stained with blood. The only wounds on the bodies were the bullet holes in the foreheads and the police are unable to account for the presence and bloody condition of the razor.

Bullock was 24 years old and Miss Miller was 22.

Iowa Jurist Secures Test for 2-Cent Fare Law.

The Missouri 2-cent passenger fare act went into effect at 6 o'clock a. m. on Wednesday and will be given a three months' trial. If at the end of that time it is found to be unenforceable its enforcement can then be fought in the courts by the railroads. The state officials are temporarily enjoined from enforcing the maximum freight rate law, and this case will be argued later in the federal court.

Judge Smith McPherson, of Red Oak, Mo., in the United States district court at Kansas City, Mo., after handing down an opinion maintaining the court's jurisdiction in the premises, ordered the promulgation of the above stated facts, which had been agreed to by the attorneys for the state and the eighteen Missouri railroads involved. The court in its decision had suggested that the 2-cent fare should be first given a practical trial before injunction proceedings preventing its enforcement be considered.

Garfield, secretary of the interior; Richard A. Ballinger, commissioner of the general land office; and Henry M. Teller, United States senator from Colorado. Permanent organization was effected by the selection of Dr. J. M. Wilson, of Wyoming, as chairman, and Fred P. Johnson, of Colorado, as secretary.

The first speaker of the afternoon was Secretary Garfield. He urged the convention in its discussion of the present land laws, a criticism of which he said had been the cause of calling together the convention, to confine its discussion to the effect of these laws on the entire country and not on any particular section of the country. The public lands, he said, were not an asset of any locality. They belong to the people of the entire nation. He said he wanted to get the point of view of the people of the west and he wanted them to get his point of view. He welcomed criticism which was constructive, but he thought that criticism which was merely an attack without a suggestion for improvement was worthless.

MOTHER SLAIN BY SON.

Boy Murders Her Because She Had Punished Him.

The supposed accidental shooting of Mrs. Thomas McCoy, in the north-west part of Rock county, by her 16-year-old son, proved to have been a case of deliberate murder, the boy having confessed to County Attorney Douglas and later to several other persons that he shot his mother because she had punished him severely. The shooting occurred Friday. Saturday the officers went out to hold the inquest, at which it was developed that the shooting was intentional and the coroner's jury returned a verdict accordingly.

The boy had claimed that he shot his mother accidentally while shooting at a meadow lark, but he confessed to the county attorney, and later to several persons, that he shot her intentionally, and gave as a reason the fact that she had been in the habit of punishing him severely. In his confession he stated that he got the gun in the house while his mother's back was turned, placed loaded shells in three empty chambers, put the weapon in his pocket, followed close behind her to the field where she was going to plant some beans, and while she was getting the seed ready for planting he, at the distance of about ten feet, drew the gun, and, deliberately aiming it at the back of her head, fired and killed her instantly. After she fell he shot her again in the side and then dropped the gun and ran to where a couple of his brothers were working in the same field.

The weapon used was a five-shot double action .38-caliber revolver. Mrs. McCoy was a widow and was living on a Kinkaid homestead. She leaves five young children. The boy is under arrest.

Woman, Adopted When Baby, Tries to Find Parents.

In the fall of 1875 when the grasshoppers had eaten everything green in and around Nebraska City a young couple who had been living on a homestead in Johnson county arrived at Dakota City with their 15-month-old daughter. They had no money and the child was left in the hands of the Friendly society. The child was given clothes, put with a family to board, and the parents returned to their home. It was the agreement with the mother that the child should remain with the family until she was old enough to be sent to a boarding school. Mrs. Carr went to California, where she died several years ago. Now comes Mrs. John C. Hoff, of Minneapolis, Minn., and states that she is Iva, daughter of Mr. John H. and Hannah Thompson, and is very anxious to find her mother, or receive news as to her whereabouts. Mrs. Hoff states that she is married, is in good financial circumstances, so her search for her mother is not from any pecuniary view. The secretary spoke with optimism regarding the quickening of public conscience and morals. FIGURES ON ASSESSMENT.

Total for State Expected to Reach $325,000,000.

While only a few of the county assessors have made their returns to the state board of equalization, the indications are the grand assessment roll will reach in the neighborhood of $325,000,000, which is one-fifth of the actual value of the state. This is based on the $1,000,000 increase each in Douglas and Lancaster counties, and a big increase in Dodge county. It is estimated that twenty counties will show an increase of $100,000; twenty counties an increase of $50,000; ten counties an increase of $20,000; and thirty-eight counties an increase of $10,000. The railroads have been increased about $5,000,000. This will make the increase on other property about $7,000,000. The grand assessment now is $323,000,000, which, with the estimated increase of $12,000,000 will bring the grand assessment up to about $325,000,000.

Canals of Mars History.

Prof. E. A. Douglas, of the University of Arizona, in an article for the Popular Science Monthly, advances the theory that some of the so-called canals of the surface of the planet Mars have no real existence, but are due to an optical illusion. He does not question the reality of the larger markings of canals, but doubts the existence of the network of the smaller waterways. Prof. Douglas' theory starts with the observation of the halo that may be seen around a small black spot when regarded from the distance of six to eight feet, and which also is often noticed around notes floating in the field of vision. He finds that the cause lies in the obscure reactions that change light waves into nerve impulses. He also calls attention to the rays that may be seen about a black spot on a light ground similar to those about a bright spot, such as a star, on a dark ground. These are attributable to irregular refraction in the eye, and account, in his opinion, for many faint canals radiating from the spots on Mars called lakes or seas.
