When she returned a few days later she began a search, which ended in finding her husband's body on the operating table of the medical college. The head was severed from the body and the faculty of the institution told Mrs. Turner, so she alleges in her petition, they did not know what had become of the head.

GIVES ALL FOR HOBOS.

James E. How Lives with Tramps in New York.

That a stringent exclusion treaty between America and Japan is measureably nearer realization than the most optimistic administration official could have believed a short time ago, is the judgment of the members of the diplomatic corps at Washington. This long sought object is expected to be attained perhaps as an indirect result of the mobbing of the Japanese at Vancouver, in British Columbia, last Saturday night. Officials in Washington deplore what they view as an unfortunate and unwarranted infraction of the treaty rights of the Japanese, but they do not fail to perceive at once the important bearing that this incident will probably have upon the negotiations between the state department and the Japanese ambassador looking to the drafting of a treaty that shall limit the incoming of Japanese coolies, instead of allowing the subject to be dealt with in the present loose fashion by what amounts to semi-official undertakings on the part of the Japanese government to withhold passports to coolies coming directly to the United States.

The belief that a treaty is now within sight is based on the conviction of officials that the Japanese government will now be brought face to face with the fact that as it cannot discriminate between Great Britain and America in the matter of demands for fair treatment of its subjects, and must by this time be convinced that the problem presented is really a racial one, the only solution will lie in the formal recognition by Japan of the right to restrict coolie immigration not only in America, but in British Columbia, Australia and other British colonies.

MARCH OF THE G. A. R.

VETERANS PARADE THROUGH SARATOGA N. Y.

Gov. Hughes and National Officers. Lead Line Through Band of National Colors and Then Review Bands—Flag Draped Grant's Bier.

Martial music, the old war-time tunes to which the soldiers of the Civil War had marched in many campaigns, awakened Saratoga at an early hour Wednesday—the day of the parade of the veterans who attended the national encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic. It was expected that 15,000 paraders would be in line and the weather, which was unfavorable in the early morning, gave promise of brightening before the hour, scheduled for the start.

Significant of the falling strength of the veterans was the fact that the parading distance was reduced to one mile—the shortest ever fixed for the national encampment. For the first time the parade was limited to members of the Grand Army instead of being open to all survivors of the war. The national colors covered the fronts of buildings, were festooned at every convenient point, strung in rows at short intervals across the streets and completely covered the interior of the great convention hall, where the sessions of the encampment were held.

Flag Honors Gen. Grant.

One of the features of the parade was the presence of a big flag which covered the body of Gen. Grant on its way from Mount McGregor to the tomb. In custody of the grenadier guard, commanded by Col. F. M. Sterrett of St. Louis, of which every man was over six feet tall and each representing one of the forty-five departments of the G. A. R., this old flag brought up the extreme rear, escorted by the whole parade and being carried at last along the whole line of review.

As planned, the national officers in carriages with Gov. Charles E. Hughes led the line, the chief of staff in command being J. Cary Winans of Toledo, the department of New York State, although entitled by seniority to fifth place, selected as hosts the left of the line, which included a representation of every department, including Alaska, and of every branch of the service. The parade was reviewed by Gov. Hughes and the national officers of the G. A. R. The day's program began with a reception at Congress hall, the New York State headquarters, in honor of Gov. Hughes at 11:30 a. m. At 12:30 luncheon was served by the department of New York to the Governor, Commander in Chief Robert B. Brown and his staff, past national officers, department commanders and the other distinguished guests. Meanwhile there had been reunions of the various organizations.

VACATIONISTS IMPORT TYPHOID

Physicians Declare Them Responsible for Spreading Disease. If Chicago people had stayed at home during their vacations this summer and drunk good lake water, the health department would not be coping with nearly 200 cases of typhoid, as is the case at present. This is the conclusion of the health officers, who have made an exhaustive investigation of the situation. They wondered what was causing so much typhoid, as the city itself is healthy enough. Calling for facts from attending physicians, the guardians of Chicago's sanitary welfare found that 51.9 per cent of the total number of typhoid were contracted outside the city. This figuring was made on the basis of known cases. There may be many other cases in the city for all the Board of Health knows, as a number of otherwise careful doctors have a habit of keeping the news to themselves when they are treating a disease which should be reported to the department. The number of typhoid cases directly traceable to the outside vacation habit is much larger than last year, when the percentage was placed at 33.

The "beautiful sparkling spring water" which many a resort prospectus tells about is good enough to swim in, but the Chicago health department would advise the seeker after country joys to take along a cask of the real thing taken from Lake Michigan for drinking purposes. The doctors think some way that a man is more apt to take typhoid when traveling than when at home attending to his business. They do not wish to be understood as "knocking" on the vacation habit, of course. They merely want to warn people that vacation may be taken on an intelligent basis.

Cityward Trend of Negroes.

In the concluding installment of Ray Stannard Baker's series on the color line in the American Magazine, an explanation is given why the negroes of the South are drifting so rapidly to the cities. It is that they feel the lack of schooling for their children in the country and the lack of police protection. The difficulty of keeping a supply of good labor is causing the owners of the big plantations to sell off small farms to the more thrifty negroes.

To Be Named New York.

It is announced from Washington that the President and the Navy Department have reached a decision to name one of the two 20,000-ton battleships authorized by the last session of Congress the New York. The armored cruiser now bearing that name will be christened Saratoga to perpetuate the name in the navy of the historic old vessel with that title, which has been condemned and is about to be broken up. The other of the two giant battleships authorized has been named Delaware.
