Unconscious Rumor. A class of little folk in an English slementary school were recently asked to define "a lady," with enrious results. The definition of Lizzie, aged 7, will strike a responsive chord in the heart of the busy woman and shows that Lizzie anust be an observing person. "A. lady is something like a man," says Lizzie, "but she's got long hair and she's got a different face and different clothes, and she's got a lot of work to do." Charlie, aged 6, is impressed by the difference between the sexes. "A lady" he finds to be "different from a man because a lady has different tiothes from a man, a lady has different eyes from a man, a lady has a different body from a man, and a lady has different suces from a man." Howard, aged 7, gets at the same facts from a fferent point of view. "A lady." he says, "has not got some trowsers but a man has got some trowsers." IN THE GOOD OLD TIMES.

Quaint Customs that Recult Decidedly Odd Manners.

In the first place, the woods are full of men, runs "The Caronicles of a Queer Girl" in the Ladles' Home Journal. They were namerous as the sands of the sen, and life was interesting, to put it mildly. In my time there was no such thing as the pairing off of one couple to "keep company" for years at a stretch, to the exclusion of other friends. A girl was free to accept the attention of any and all young men, and have a different escort to every dance, picule or party of the season. Even an engaged girl was not expected to go only with her flance, but made things lively by entertaining and going about with different young men and keeping the community upon the qui vive as to which would be her final

There was no time for idling in those days-hours for fooling dull care and builling stern necessity. A pretty girl interesting group of pedestrians or a dashing horseman at almost any hour in the day. If she went downtown (she did not go often, gentle reader, as girls do nowadays) it was strange, indeed, if there was not rivalry as to which of the young millants should walk home with her. On Sunday the rear seats of the sancutary were comfortably filled with young gentlemen of no special religious professions, and it was by no means the least interesting feature of the service passing out of the church door and down the line. smilling and bestowing glances upon them as they stood with raised hats. gravely saluting one pretty devotee after another as she came out with the Sabbath halo around her face.

There was a custom, now obsolete, no doubt for lack of numbers as well "grand rush" on Sunday afternoons. As I look back now I can see a phalanx and buttonhole bouquets moving along the village street.

STARS OR STOMACHS.

Barrier de la frança Rosanna has been many years in service in a certain college town, and is well known to all the friends of her employers. One of them, just returned from a long absence, stopped her on the street to make inquiries about the health of the professor, who, she had just learned, had been ill.

"I do hope he is better," she said. "Neuritis is enough to endure at any time, but coming this year, I am afraid he must have felt the interruption to his work even harder to bear than the

"Yes'm, he did that," Rosanna assented, sympathetically. "He was that fretty about his darling big book there was no pacifying the man. "But he's over it now, ma'am, and cried the lady. "Why, he doesn't know anything about diseases! He wouldn't know mumps from menia-

"Excipt for me knowledge being coutrairy to it, . I'd be of that way of thinking mestif," admitted Rosanna, confidentially. "But on'y yesterday it was I heard him say to the mistress, exulting-like, 'Congratulate me, Alice, I've finished the appendix!' So ye see, ma'am, 'tis diseases for certain.

"Ah, 'tis the wonderful man he is! Stars or stumicks, alil's one to the brains of him!"

This compliment Rosanua's hearerwho did not enlighten her concerning the different varieties of appendixlater repeated to the professor, who naserts stoutly that none he ever received has afforded him more thorough satisfaction.

His Son Bill No Fool.

"There's that son Bill of mine," said the old farmer as he chewed at a toothpick and looked out across the meadow. "I've always considered Bill about as near a fool as they make 'em. One day in May he come home from town and says to me:

"'Dad, the wheat crop's short by 200,000,648 hushels." " 'T' t of it? says I.

"Wheat's going to jump." "'Well, let 'er jump.' "'But you've got $200 in cash. Buy wheat and make half a thousand."

"'Bill,' says I, 'when I want to play the fool and lose my $200 I'll come to you for advice."

"That shot him up, fust as I meant it to. He had a hundred of his own. and next day he went up to town agin. He didn't say nuthin' for a week and then he suddenly shows me a bank book with $500 to his credit.

"'How'd you do it?' says I with my eyes bulgin' out. " Dad,' he replies, 'when I want to

Gower street, again, is a somewhat monotonous street of prosperous looking middle-class houses. Few people know that in No. 110 Charles Darwin wrote certainly not his "Origin of as spirit, of giving a pretty girl a Species," but his famous work on "Coral Reefs." Again, in 56 Great Queen street, Boswell wrote a considof hats and trousers, audacious faces erable portion of his famous "Life of Johnson.' At 6 Frah street, Soho, William Hazlitt during the last six mouths of his life wrote some of his most notable essays. As for Charles Dickens, London teems with memories of that great novelist. At 48 Doughty street he began "Barnaby Rudge," finished "Pickwick" and "Oliver Twist," and wrote "Nicholas Nickleby." At 1 Devonshire Terrace be finished "Barnaby Rudge" and "Dombey and Son" and wrote "The Old Curiosity Shop," "Martin Chuzzwwit," "The Christmas Carol," "David Copperfield," "The Cricket on the Hearth" and "The Haunted Man." At Tavistock House he wrote "Bleak House," "Little Dorritt" and "A Tale of Two Cities." Henry Fielding wrote "Tom Jones" in a house on the site of the present Bow street police station, and Smollet wrote "Humphrey Clinker" and probably "Peregrine Pickle" at Moumouth House, Upper Cheyne row. Richardson's "Pamela," "Clarissa" and "Grandison" were written at The Grange. Bricks Taken Out of Rules at Bismya Bear Date of 4500 B. C. In a sand-swept belt of central Babylonia, that country of ancient ruins, in a region dangerous and deserted because far from water, and on the border of the territory of several hostile Arab tribes, lies the low ruin of Bismve. says Dr. E. J. Banks in Putnam's Magazine. Few explorers have ever visited it, and those few did so at the peril of their lives. Dr. Peters of New York, while excavating at Nippur, discovered at Bismya a clay tablet of an ancient date. Germau explorers are reported to have said that the ruins originated with the civilization of the Arabs. However, not only the age of the rains but the name and history of the ancient city of which they are composed continued a mystery until re-

Christmas day, 1903, we began excavattug at Blunya and the result was the discovery of the oldest temple in the world. The walls of the tower soon appeared, the summit was cleared and the first inscription discovered upon the surface was a brick stamped with the name of Dungi of 2750 B. C. Just beneath it were other bricks bearing the name of UrGur of 2800 B. C. A little lower appeared a crumpled piece of gold with the name of Naram Sin of 2750 B. C., and just below that level were the large square bricks peculiar to Sargon of 3800 B. C., probably the first of the Semitic kings of Babylonia, Although we had dag but a meter and a half below the bricks of Dungi we had revealed several strata extending over the period from 2750 B. C., or more than 1,000 years, and still eleven meters of earlier rains lay beneath us. We dug lower. Unknown types of bricks appeared, and two and a half meters from the surface we came upon a large platform constructed of the pecultar plano-convex bricks which were the building material of 4500 B. C.
