Sioux City Tribune, 2nd: When C. W. Schwartz, proprietor of a saloon at Naconda, Nebraska, returned home from Sioux City yesterday after being absent all day, he found that his wife of one month had had taking with her all of his ready cash, which amounted to $311. No parting word was left by the bride; no intimation was made to Schwartz's relatives that she was going, and when the truth dawned upon the husband he was grief-stricken. Walking to Hubbard, Schwartz secured a livery rig and drove to Sioux City, reaching here at 12:30 this morning, and located his wife in a rooming house at 709 Fourth street, but she refused him admittance and would not talk to him. All night long the distressed husband stood guard on the opposite side of the street, and when she attempted to enter a hack about 7:30 o'clock this morning he rushed across to her and begged her to return with him to Naconda, but without success as speaking to him, she jumped into the vehicle and ordered the driver to hurry. Running as fast as he could, Schwartz followed the carriage for several blocks and then gave up the chase in despair. Covered with mud from his long drive and haggard in appearance from grief and loss of sleep, Schwartz went to police headquarters and related his story to Judge Sam Page who issued a warrant for the arrest of Mrs. Schwartz, charging her with grand larceny. Detective Curtis was detailed on the case, and accompanied by Schwartz, went out to look for the runaway bride. "I don't care for the money," declared Schwartz. "It's the woman I want, I can't understand why she ran away. She did not like it because I was in the saloon business, and I promised her I would sell out and would have been out of the business by May 1st when we were coming to Sioux City and start a hotel." Mrs. Schwartz was Miss Bessie Stuart, of Council Bluffs, and was married to Schwartz in that city on Feb. 27 of this year. She formerly resided in Sioux City. "Not a cross word had passed between us since we had been married," said Schwartz. When I left home yesterday she seemed unusually happy because I had found a purchaser for my saloon and would be out of the business in another month. I had $311 in the cash register, and this I gave to her to keep until I returned. She asked me not to stay in Sioux City very long and I hurried back as soon as my business had been transacted, only to find that she had left me, without cause, apparently. My father told me that soon after I left home my wife packed her belongings, had one of my men carry her baggage to the depot and that was the last seen of her there." Schwartz declared that he would not prosecute her. All he seemed to wish for was that she would return to him.
