While The State Journal has been one of the leading papers of the state for nearly forty years, yet its most rapid growth has been recently, during which time it has come to be recognized by many as Nebraska's greatest paper, making most of those things that interest Nebraskans most, in this way creating a place for itself in the daily life of thousands of Nebraska homes. The country press generally could be quoted as saying that the editorial page of The Journal is exceptionally strong and fearlessly independent. It is also unusually bright. Bibby himself being a gem. No writer in Nebraska ever had the warm admiration of so many as Bibby. His column in The Journal is alone worth the price of the paper. His wholesome philosophy will put sunshine and cheer into the most chronic grinch. The state university, the state house and all the other public institutions at Lincoln make The Journal peculiarly a paper for state people. It is clean, excluding all liquor and impure medical advertising. Its sporting department is clever and there with the goods. More money is spent for state telegraphic news than by other state dailies. If you want to know what is happening in Nebraska, as well as the whole world, The Journal is the paper for you. Why not give it this trial subscription?

Sioux City Journal, 9th: To induce the Sioux City Service company to extend its street car service to Crystal Lake in the plan which is being agitated at present, principally by residents of South Sioux City, who appear to desire additional access to the lake. Considerable time at the meeting of the South Sioux City council last night was given over to a discussion of the proposition and with scarcely a dissenting voice the councilmen expressed themselves in favor of the plan. A resolution was adopted favoring the extension of the Service company's line to Crystal Lake, and although the matter of a franchise was discussed at length, it is believed the residents of South Sioux City would vote for a franchise with a large majority. That the residents of Sioux City also are interested in the plan is shown by several petitions which were shown to the councilmen last night, containing nearly 3000 names of Sioux City citizens expressing themselves as favoring the proposition. According to P S Macomber, city clerk of South Sioux City, there is a growing desire on the part of South Sioux City citizens for additional service to Crystal Lake. He said the residents of that town are enthusiastic over the plan. According to J L Kennedy, counsel for the Service company, that corporation has not asked for a franchise to Crystal Lake and has no desire to create competition with existing lines. "The greatest drawback to such a project," said Mr Kennedy, "is the contract under which the Service company carries passenger over the combination bridge. We pay 5 cents for every passenger we carry across the bridge," he said, "while the bridge company issues tickets permitting persons to cross the bridge at the rate of 2 1/2 cents." E L Kirk, general manager for the Service company, said the company had not asked for a franchise and was not pushing the matter. According to South Sioux City officials the entire distance from the present terminus of the Service company's line into South Sioux City to Crystal Lake is in the corporate limits of South Sioux City, so there probably would be little difficulty in securing right of way in case the determination is made to extend the line. Plans are being made for ten additional street lights in South Sioux City and they probably will be installed within a short time.

SHOWY ACCOMPLISHMENTS.
Rather Than Domestic Qualities, Distinguish the Up-to-date Girl.
The up-to-date girl may be very clever mentally. She may delve in the different philosophies and investigate the weighty problems of the hour. She may develop, physically, a standard of high perfection, out-of-door sports being a part of her daily regime, but in the possession of the domestic qualities, those that relate to the care of the home, she seems in many instances unaccountably lacking, says a writer. The girl of to-day does not take the interest in, or time for, domestic science that her mother did. She prefers the parlor to the kitchen and does not deem it necessary that she have a practical knowledge of the home she inhabits. All is so well-ordered and in the hands of such competent servants that there seems no need for her intervention.
The art of cooking is not so attractive as decorative art, or some other fancy that seems to her more ornamental. She can always make candy—seldom bread. There is something lacking in a girl's education who has not been taught that a thorough knowledge of the kitchen is just as great an accomplishment as that of any of the arts or sciences. There may be no necessity for her to enter the kitchen, but she should avail herself of the opportunity, when young, to learn that which in later life will prove of such great benefit.
While man does not in any way enter into the young girl's life in her connection with the art of cooking, later she cuts a big factor in his life for her knowledge (or lack of it) on the subject. If a man, as is said, must be reached "through his stomach"—inelegant but true—then the "reaching" should be scientifically done. The temper of a household oftentimes depends on a meal. As physicians claim one must be in an amiable mood when partaking of such in order to aid digestion, the preparation of the meal should be hygienic so as to insure best results.
Too little thought is given to this subject on which depends so much. It is nothing uncommon to hear a girl spoken of as "a beautiful dancer," or a "fine rider," but no seldom hears her mentioned as a "good cook." It is because she prefers the showy accomplishments to the plainer and more practical.

AT CLOSE RANGE.
"Buffalo" Jones, who had charge of the wild animals in Yellowstone Park, discovered that the cougar is king of all the beasts of North America. Even a grizzly dashed away in great haste when a cougar made its appearance. Zane Grey, in "The Last of the Plainsmen," recounts some of Jones' experiences.
Jones asserts that a cougar would usually run from a hunter, but that this action is not to be relied on. And a wounded cougar is as dangerous as a tiger.
In his hunts Jones carried a shotgun, and shells loaded with ball for the cougar, and others loaded with fine shot for small game. One day, about ten miles from camp, the hounds took a trail and ran rapidly, as there were only a few inches of snow. Jones found a large lion had taken refuge in a tree that had fallen against another, and aiming at the shoulder of the beast, he fired both barrels.
The cougar made no sign that he had been hit.
Jones reloaded and fired at the head. The old fellow growled fiercely, turned in the tree, and walked down head first, something he would not have been able to do had the tree been upright.
Realizing that he had been shooting the shot at the animal, Jones began a hurried search for a shell loaded with ball. The lion made for him, and compelled him to dodge behind trees. Even though the hounds kept nipping the cougar, the persistent fellow still pursued the hunter.
At last Jones found the right shell, just as the cougar reached for him. Major, the leader of the hounds, darted bravely in and grasped the leg of the beast just in the nick of time. This enabled Jones to take aim and fire at close range, which ended the fight.
Upon examination it was discovered that the cougar had been half-blinded by the fine shot, which accounted for the ineffectual attempts he had made to catch Jones.

The Call of the Coast

The Seattle Exposition invites you. The Pacific Coast country, in the development of its marvelous civilization, solicits you to journey through that land. The melting snow of the mountains is a magical resource, shaped to the genius of electrical and horticultural wizards; those mighty forests are the last of their kind left standing in this country; there are no such orchards, orange groves or floral landscapes in the world—nor have there ever been. On a tour of the Coast you pass through an empire where the romance of the Spanish past has been merged with the human activities of the new west.
See your own country; see the West with its fast growing wealth, population and incomparable cities, and learn what a future it may offer to your sons; this five thousand mile journey is a broad education. 1909 offers much to tempt you.
