SHAH SEEKS REFUGE

PERSIAN RULER IN HIDING IN RUSSIAN LEGATION.

Non-Combatants Seek Shelter in Cellars, as Shells Are Bursting Everywhere--Royalist Troops Complain of Insufficient Rations.

Despite the efforts of Gen. Liahoff to open negotiations with the national leaders and the agreement of both sides to cease hostilities, straight fighting was in progress throughout Thursday between Persian Cossacks and the nationalist around Artillery square and between the royalist Bakharis and the nationalist at Teheran, Persia. The insurgents, however, continued in the ascendancy, and as reinforcements are continually reaching them from the outside the outcome seems to be a foregone conclusion.

The control of the royalist troops has really passed from the shah into the hands of Gen. Liahoff, who tried to stop hostilities. Throughout the Russian legation Gen. Liahoff approached the nationalist leaders and agreed that the Cossacks should not fire except on the undisciplined soldiers of the shah, who were looting houses.

The fighting around the Cossack barracks ceased Thursday afternoon and negotiations for their surrender are being carried on by Gen. Liahoff. The shah's troops are discontented on account of not having sufficient food and pay. The fighting is centered about the British legation. A number of loyal Bakharis took up their position on the tops of houses in the vicinity of the legation and near the nationalist camp, which they bombarded with a heavy rifle fire. The nationalists responded, and for several hours the British telegraph office and other foreign houses were under fire. During a lull the women were removed to the British legation.

The battle Wednesday night between the Cossacks besieged an Artillery square and the nationalists who attempted to dislodge them was exceedingly fierce.

Friday morning the shah took refuge in the Russian legation.

JULY WHEAT SOARING.

Bulge of 7 Cents Recorded in Chicago Grain Bids.

Wheat for July delivery advanced 7 cents during a stormy session on the board of trade at Chicago Wednesday, established a new high record mark for the season and giving promise of a repetition of the recent deal headed by James A. Patten and his colleagues in the May option. The top mark reached by the July delivery Wednesday was $1.27, compared with $1.20, the closing figure of the previous day.

The immediate cause of the buying flurry which resulted in the sensational advance was the additional rainfall Tuesday in Kansas and Missouri, where the new crop of wheat is now being harvested, or is awaiting the visit of the threshing, and dispatches from other harvesting and wheat shipping sections of the country telling of damage to the new crop by excessive rains. Numerous reports were received from points in Illinois, Missouri, Kentucky and Tennessee, which claimed that the wheat already harvested is sprouting in the shocks owing to the unfavorable weather conditions.

A large "sleeping" short interest has existed for some time in the July option, and the action of the market Wednesday indicated that many of these traders had awakened to the serious aspect of the situation. Leading warehouse men and professional traders are said to be the principal shorts. The elevator men weeks ago bought wheat in the fields in Kansas, Oklahoma and other winter wheat states and "hedged" against their country purchases by selling July in this market. Since that time wet weather has interfered with threshing operations and prevented quick delivery of the new crop in Chicago and the southwestern markets. There is practically no wheat suitable for delivery on contracts in this city at the present time, and what little there is belongs to the Patent interests.

STORY OF A CRIME.

J. B. Saylor Murdered by Dr. W. R. Miller.

That J. B. Saylor, the Crescent City, Ill., banker who was shot and killed Sunday by Dr. W. R. Miller, remained passive for the sake of his 17-year-old daughter while talk of alleged infidelity of his wife and Dr. Miller was rife, not only in his home town, but in other parts of the county, is asserted by the decedent's closest friends. On this theory alone are they able to account for the country banker's uncomplaining silence during the last two years, during which time it is said that Dr. Miller has, with growing frequency, been Mrs. Saylor's guest at her home and her companion on long drives, rambles through the woods and on hunting expeditions.

According to W. R. Nightingale, cashier of the bank of which Mr. Saylor was vice president, the devoted father determined to suffer in silence rather than take any action which would involve his child in notoriety.

That Dr. Miller stood in real danger of being lynched Tuesday night is asserted by Mr. Nightingale and many others. More than 100 men thronged the streets of the usually quiet village of Crescent City trying to organize themselves for an attack on the jail there. One man with a rope was forcibly taken to his home by the cooler heads, whose counsel prevailed. Among the latter was Willis Saylor, a brother of the slain man.

Dr. Miller's defense is that he shot only when attacked by the banker with a hatchet. Evidence casting a shadow on this statement was given at the inquest.

The tragedy occurred at about 10 o'clock Sunday night. Mrs. Miller, wife of the doctor, had left a few days previously to visit her parents at Sharon, Pa., and Dr. Miller was taking his meals at the Saylor table, sleeping at his own home.

Officers are stationed about the vicinity of the saloons to see that all close on time, but none watch the opening, says they see it that none open before the bell taps off the opening hour. So far the scheme works well. ### A GORGEOUS SPECTACLE.

Epochmaking Events Recalled by Lake Champlain Tercentenary.

One of the most remarkable celebrations in the history of the country was that held in northern New York, where the tercentenary of the discovery of Lake Champlain by Samuel De Champlain, the French explorer, was fittingly observed. The Dominion of Canada was represented by several high officials; the United States by President Taft; New York by Gov. Hughes, Vermont by Gov. Frost; and France and Great Britain by their ambassadors, M. Jusserand and Hon. James Bryce. The fête commenced at Burlington, Vt., with special religious observance.

The celebration proper began at Crown Point, Monday. There are located forts and redoubts which loomed large in the history of the French and Indian war and the American revolution. During the week at various points about Lake Champlain there were scheduled 23 pageants or tableaux, 3 representing the history of the Iroquois confederacy down to the arrival of the French in this section of the country and 15 illustrating the religious ceremonies and social customs of the Iroquois and the Algonquians in war and peace. The most interesting and gorgeous of the pageants were the two depicting the discovery of the lake by Champlain and the battle between the Huron-Algonquin allies and the fighting Iroquois in which the explorer had a hand. Canadian and American Indians, descendants of the warriors who fought with and against the great French explorer, took part in these tableaux.

Great interest attached to Fort Ticonderoga, which was captured during the revolution by Col. Ethan Allen and his Green Mountain boys. The fort is being reconstructed at a cost of $500,000 by Mrs. Stephen H. Pelt, daughter of Colonel Robert M. Thompson, of New York, who is so deeply interested in the patriotic history of the section that he is giving the money for the reconstruction of the fort. The work barracks were completed in time for the celebration.

Plattsburg's day was celebrated Wednesday. Near this city Benedict Arnold fought and lost the first naval action of the revolution. His flagship, the Royal Savage, has been lying where she sank in that fight for 133 years. The large Revenge, one of Arnold's fleet, had been raised and is in the pageant. On Thursday the center of attraction was at Burlington, Vt., where many delightful historical pageants were enacted.
