

Have One Doctor

No sense in running from one doctor to another. Select the best one, then stand by him. Do not delay, but consult him in time when you are sick. Ask his opinion of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for coughs and colds. Then use it or not, just as he says.

Always keep a box of Ayer's Pills in the house. Just one pill at bedtime, now and then, will ward off many an attack of biliousness, indigestion, sick headache. How many years has your doctor known these pills? Ask him all about them.

Experiments With Oats

The Nebraska Experiment Station has just issued Bulletin No. 113, entitled "Oats." It discusses results of variety tests, different rates of sowing, and the cultivation of oats.

During the past six years some twenty varieties have been tested, and about twelve of these varieties have been tested for a period of five years. The varieties can be summarized into early types and late types. The early varieties, which have ripened on an average July 11th, have averaged 53.9 bushels per acre, while the late varieties have ripened on an average July 20th and have given an average yield of about 40.1 bushels a difference of about 14 bushels per acre as an average of five years, in favor of the early varieties of oats. Sixty Day, Kherston and Texas Red, among the early varieties, are the ones most highly recommended. Among the late varieties, Lincoln oats have given best results.

Various rates of seeding Kherston oats have been tested since 1903. Results have shown in general that about eight pecks per acre gives best results when the Kherston oats are drilled and about ten pecks per acre when they are sown broadcast. However the rate of seeding depends somewhat upon the variety of oats used. There is a table showing the relative size of grain in different varieties of oats, like Kherston, eight pecks will furnish about as many plants per acre as fourteen or nineteen of larger grained varieties. Hence the rate of seeding depends a great deal on the size of the grain. Counts have been made upon the different rates of seeding for two years to determine the number of plants and suckers or tillers produced per acre.

Where the planting is thin the plants tiller freely, and almost as many heads per acre are produced as when eight pecks is used as where eight pecks is used, due to the stooing of the oats under thin planting.

Cultivation of oats has been practiced since 1808, experiments being conducted with plants sown in wide rows, 12 to 24 inches apart, also experiments where the oats have been sown with the regular drill and broadcast and afterwards harrowed with an ordinary smoothing harrow or weeder. It has not been found possible to plant oats in drills wide apart except in a very dry season, when drilling twelve inches apart give fair results. Where oats have been sown in the ordinary way with a drill and harrowed from one to three times soon after the oats come up, an average increase in yield of 4.8 bushels for a period of 7 years has resulted. However, where the oats were a slight decrease in yield, due to the fact that many plants were destroyed in harrowing. It is recommended that oats be drilled and harrowed.

Headings of Nebraska Kherston names are not on the mailing list of the station may obtain the bulletin free of cost, by application to E. A. Burnett, director, agricultural experiment station, Lincoln, Neb.

Back to The Farm

The greatest advertisement ever given to western farm lands is contained in the present discussion regarding the high cost of living. Our population and its demands has increased beyond the ratio of increased soil products. The man who owns a farm is surer today than ever before of its future value and worth to him. Nearly a million immigrants come annually to this country. The west is increasing in population at the rate of half a million a year. The man who owns a 30 or 40-acre worn-out farm in Europe is considered independent, yet the west offers you 320-tracts of Mondell lands or 80-acre tracts of Government irrigated land, at a price that comes near being a gift.

With the absolute certainty that these lands will be beyond the reach of the homesteader in a few years, it will pay you to get hold of a western farm for yourself or your son before it is too late. Get in touch with me.
