The duty of Nebraskans who desire to assist in the work of developing the state, is to call the attention of homeseckers to the opportunities that are offered by the great young state.

There are 100, 900 quarter sections of unoccupied land that may be made into profitable farms. The soil is fertile, the rainfall quite equal to that of other sections that have become agriculturally rich, and the transportation facili ties far superior to what the more favor ed sections had a dozen years ago. There is room and opportunity for the The hardships of the early pioneers need longer be endured by newcomers They will have the advantage of schools and churches, and railroads and markets right from the start. Their only capital needs to be industry, frugality and honesty. Some of Nebraska's most prosperous farmers of today were renters ten or fifteen years ago. What they have done a hundred thousand more men may do within the next ten or fifteen years. The same capital, the same soil and the same frugality necessary to acquire tended the summer term. a competence in the Canadian north. west, would mean ample riches after anequal length of time upon a Nebraska farm. For years the Argonouts travel ed across the plains of Nebraska in search of the gold and silver of the mountains, unmindful of the fact that at the grass roots in Nebraska lay a store of gold and silver than were hidden in the mountains in all the ages of the past- eternal mines of riches than the famed gold fields of Alaska have yielded in a decade, and the men who mined their wealth from the soil of Nebraska endured no hardships compared to the Alaskans,

Other thousands are being lured to the "bonanzas" of the northwest, unmindful of the fact that greater riches and greater opportunities lie in the soi of the great state of Nebraska.

There are millions of acres of government land in Nebraska all of it good for something, most of it good for genera purposes and much of it good for any thing in the line of agriculture suited to he temperate zone.
