Lens and Elsle Wilkins of Homer, AN EASTERN PLEASURE TRIP

Mrs. Charles Voss and Daughter. Thekla Voss, Describe Their Recent Trip to New York.

On our return from Niagra Falls to Buffale we saw the Eric canal, the proof of great American enterprise. We also noticed th identity of Americanism with its extensive advertising schemes which are in evidence verywhere. This is deplorable inasmuc demonstrates the ever omnipresence of unmercialism. This conspiciousness of some form of advertising was noticeable as oon as we returned from Canada.

Friday at 9 o'clock p. m. we left for Nev York City, arriving Saturday morning at at So'clock. We will not adhere to the aes thetical view of the city, but turn to to the naterial side, for a short time at least. We stopped at the Grand Union hotel of Park avenue and 42nd St. It was a desirable location, being near the central part of of the city. The hotel compared to the West in Sioux City in service and price, with reference to rooms only, but is a larger structure. Nevertheless this would hardly be placed in the category of a third class hotel, ranging in prices as such. For the purpose of experimental investigation, we lined at The Athens, a Greek restaurant, where we found the same as at the Grand Union, a corps of men waiters, tables for two persons, a complete change of table linen after each serving, individual crumb tray, finger bowl, etc. At either one of these places, a double cut of strioin steak, neluding rolls only, was $1.25. With the

these places, a double cut of strioin steak, including rolls only, was $1.25. With the coffee, 10 cents per order, came the indescriable sterilized milk. Uream being an essential part of our menu, found that we must put in an order at a cents extra for each of us.

To make the most possible use of the time for the remainder of the day, we outlined a course of procedure. We went to Fifth avenue, and Central Fark, the most notable parts of the city. At the former we procurred a guide who conveyed us in a cab to many of the most interesting places, giving us very explicit information as we went along. We drove up Fifth avenue which is New York's fashionable theroughfare, famel for its costly residences, the people who live in them, its hotels clubs, churces, libraries and the brilliant social display which gives to the street its dominent air. Beginning at Washington Square on the south, it extends six miles, past Central Park, to Harlem river.

Among the many notable residences and other points of interest, we have space to mention but a few best known to all. On 7th street is the home of Miss Helen Gould, and Robert Goelet, and Cornellur Vanderbilt, ir, on 9th street. On the west side between fist and 62nd streets are the brown stone residences known as the Vanderbilt twin houses, owned by George Vanderbilt, the Marjorie Gould Drexel's house, a wedding gift from her father, the Fletcher home, having a figure of a baby perched on the edge of the roof heralding the occu-

The Cocnelius Vanderbilt house extends from 57th street to 58th street and has a frontage on the side street of 125 feet. The style is that of the Chacau de Hoise, in France, which gives it the appearance of a varitable palace. Mr. Gerry's is the first one in a long succession of naintial residences fronting Central Park above 60th street, which constitutes what is popularly called "Millionaires" Row." They are houses remarkable for size, diversibled style, and the impressive architectural effects. Among the most notable are the following: The double houses of Mrs. Windastor. Colonel John Jacon Astor. Perry Belmont, George Gould, and that of the late C. F. It consists of a bronze bust of the architect, by D. C. French, with a curved stone bench. The dedication was made in recognition of his service in the cause of art in America, and he also designed the Lonox library.

street is the new two million dollar residence of Andrew Carnegi, having the unusual feature of a spacious garden surrounding it. This marks the limit of Fifth avenue's noteworthy houses. Near here is the home of Mrs. J. W. Bourden. The woman who committed suicide by putting a gas jet in her mouth, as many will remember.

From here we went to Riverside Drive, which is between the Hudson river and Morningside Park. On Morningside Heights are seen the buildings of Columbia university, and Barnard college, and shortly beyond we come to the ascent upon which rises the tomb of General Grant. The spot is one of natural grandure of surroundings. The bluff rises 130 feet above the river, sentered about are forest trees, below is the broad expanse of Hudson, animated here and there with sail and steam, opposite are the slopes of New Jersey, with the Palisades stretching away to the north until they soften in the distance and merge in the purple haze. It would have been difficult to find a grander site than this on Riverside Drive, for the tomb which New York erected to the memory of the great general. It is constructed of white granife, with white marble interior. The proportions are imposing. The square structure is 96 feet on the side and 72 feet in height, the circular cupols with lonic columns is 70 feet in diameter, and the dome rises 130 feet from the ground. From the plaza on the south side steps 70 feet wide ascend to the portico, which has double lines of Doric columns before the entrance, with its two massive, bronze boors weighing 2,000 pounds respectively. Above the portico, two sculptured figures, emblematic of Peace and War, flank a panel on which are inscribed the words, "Let Us Have Peace." The decorative scheme provides for bronze statutes and groupes on the portico, parapet and dome.

The interior plan is cruciform, 76 feet between the walls. The four great piers of the rotunda carry arches whose crowns are 50 feet from the floor, the circular galery, supported by the arches, is 40 feet in diameter. The dome rises 105 feet above the floor. In the pendentives sculptural reliefs symbolize Youth, Military Life, Civil Life and Death. In small rooms surrounding the rotunda are stands of battle flags, framed documental scripts upon the walls and an embroidered picture, beautiful and natural reprodution of Ulysis S. The hush of the vast chamber, the mellowed light and the simplicity and dignity of the architectural plan and detail, combine to give solemnity to the place. Through a circular opening in the floor the sarcophaguses are seen in the crypt directly beneath the center of the dome. These are of polished red porphyry and are supported upon a pedestal of granate. The companion sarcophagus, a counterpart in material and design, was here provided in compliance with an expressed wish of General Grant that Mrs. Grant should hely his side. As loving tribute to both beautiful wreaths had recently been placed on the sarcophaguses and at different places in the crypt. To the left upon a stand was draped the national ensign.

The cost of this magnificent tomb was monowed. Among the earliest contributors to the monument fund was the Chinese statesman, Li Hung Chang, between whom and General Grant a friendship existed since their meeting in China during the General Grant a friendship existed since their meeting in China during the General Grant a friendship existed since their meeting in China during the General Grant a friendship existed since their meeting in China during the General Grant is death in Hung Chang sent to the Chinese Minister at Washington a wreath to be placed at the tomb. When Li was in the United States in 1896, he visited the temporary tomb at Riverside and laid upon the sarcophagus a wreath of smilax, laurei and orchids. The following year he sent a gingko tree to be planted here, which is on the north ride of the present tomb.

We decended a flight of steps, directly to the left we saw in a niche, the Tiffany (baptismal) font, semi-globallar in form, encircled by and inlaid with, large, round and oval shaped emeralds. The font cost $30,000. The reredos, or alterpiece, is also of Tiffany glass. In the center of this was an emblem of mortality, symbolized by a peaceck holding a banch of grapes. The color scheme was augmented by the use of genuine diamonds, rubles, emeralds, ametheyst, topaz, etc., which, in the soft light of the crypt, brought out a magnificent effect. The seclusion, tranquility and sanctity of the piace were exaited by all this dedication to the cause of Christianity which has been transcendent for canturies past and will be for ages to come.
