Chronic Diseases

Offer Their Services Free of Charge

The United Doctors, licensed by the state of Iowa for the treatment of deformities and all nervous and chronic diseases of men, women and children, offer to all who call on this trip, consultation, examination, advice free, making no charge whatever, except the actual cost of medicine. All that is asked in return for these valuable services is that every person treated will state the result obtained to their friends and thus prove to the sick and afflicted in every city and locality that at last treatments have been discovered that are absolutely sure and certain in their effect.

These doctors are considered among America's leading stomach and nerve specialists and experts in the treatment of all chronic diseases and so great and wonderful have been their cures that in many cases it is hard indeed to find the dividing line between skill and miracle.

Diseases of the stomach, intestines, liver, blood, skin, nerves, heart, spleen, kidneys, or bladder, rheumatism, sciatica, diabetes, bed-wetting, leg ulcers, weak lungs and those afflicted with long standing, deep seated, chronic diseases, that have baffled the skill of the family physician, should not fail to call.

Many Wonderful Cures.

According to their system no more operations for appendicitis, gall stones, tumors, gonor or cancer. They were among the first in America to earn the name of the "Bloodless Surgeons," by doing away with knife, with blood and with all pain in the successful treatment and cure of these dangerous diseases.

If you have kidney or bladder troubles bring a two ounce bottle of your urine for chemical analysis and microscopic examination.

Deafness often cured in sixty days. No matter what your ailment may be, no matter what others may have told you, no matter what experience you may have had with other physicians, if you want to get well again, it will be to your advantage to see them. Go at once. Have it forever settled in your mind. If your case is incurable they will give you such advice as may prolong your life. Do not put off this duty you owe yourself or friends or relatives who are suffering because of your sickness, as a visit this time costs you nothing and may save your life.

Remember, this free offer is for this trip only.

AN EASTERN PLEASURE TRIP

Mrs. Charles Voss and Daughter, Thelma Voss, Describe Their Recent Trip to New York.

While returning from Jersey City to New York City on the ferry, we saw freight cars transported on flat boats across the North river from city to city. This seemed somewhat peculiar to us, but probably because we were not accustomed to such sights.

For to obtain a wider range of experience, we took the subway cars to the Brooklyn bridge from the subway entrance at Madison square which took us directly up to the bridge. The Brooklyn bridge and the Union square are the two largest subway stations. The subway line to the Brooklyn bridge has a four-track system. All subways are thirteen feet high throughout.

The subway cars, termed the "Rapid Transit Railroad," are run by electricity and compare to a train of electric cars at a station passenger train. At the Brooklyn bridge station, we found it somewhat difficult to find our way out as there was a seeming labyrinth of ways leading to the stairs out to the east. Which way was out was the dilemma which we had as we stood at the station.

Nevertheless we succeeded in finding our way up stairs. Even though we were yet under the sky we were conscious of the fact that we were about to enter an unusual place.

As our aim was to portray in a picturesque and realistic manner the life of the city and its surrounding views.

The bridge has a promenade for foot passengers, two railroad tracks, and two roadways for rapid transit cars and trolleys. The promenade is the central and widest part of the bridge. From the promenade on either side of the bridge, there are sidewalks and elevated walkways 10 1/2 feet in diameter which pass over the towers to their respective ends.

From these elevated sidewalks the superstructure and forms a great triangle of net-work of steel beams, with the towers.

The ropes are all of galvanized steel wire and are capable of sustaining five times the load they will ever be called on to carry.

It is difficult for one to understand how the bridge is held together. From the intricate and complicated plan of this marvelous construction.

The volume of traffic is enormous and thousands of people pass over this bridge daily. The distance from the Brooklyn bridge station to the tower is a half mile. The inequality of division depends on the fact that the New York approach is much greater in extent than the Brooklyn approach.

We walked this distance to the New York tower that we could indulge in the privilege of a closer observation of the bridge and surroundings to a better advantage.

The rectangular tower has two arches which arch over the bridge. Its interior curves are lancet in form. On the center pier dividing the arches was a tablet on which were the names of the countries and a list of names of persons connected with the building of the bridge and also the date when the New York tower was finished.

The bridge was completed in the year 1883. We walked a short distance beyond the New York tower where we could overlook the bridge, and the passing cars which vibrate the entire structure, making us feel somewhat apprehensive for the time being; yet the complex and tremendous construction seems so simple and so sturdy.

Looking up the river one can see the Williamsburg and Queensboro bridges. The Williamsburg is the greatest suspension bridge in the world. It was finished in 1884 and is one-fifth of a mile longer than the Brooklyn bridge.

Look to the river in the upper New York bay could be seen Governors Island, where is the military department of the Atlantic which is now to be the chief military post of the country.

When here one can see the Statue of Liberty in the upper bay and in the distance beyond the island are the Narrows, the opening between Long Island and Staten Island, through which New York's commerce passes out to sea. Where the East and North Hudson rivers join their currents it is about twenty miles out to the ocean.

Looking to the east is Brooklyn, and to the west and north is New York, where towers above the myriads of buildings are seen the Singer and Metropolitan buildings. The height of the Singer building above the sidewalk with the pinnacle is 62 feet, measured by the same standard the Metropolitan is 88 feet, making it the highest building in New York City.

The following day the Metropolitan was the outstanding feature of interest. It is an Madison avenue facing Madison square and is the Metropolitan Life Insurance company's stateily home, and is one of the finest office buildings in existence. Its total floor area is about twenty-five acres and the people employed number 15,000.

Madison square is an old distinguished neighborhood. It is a beautiful area bounded by the towers, lawns, fountains and the statues of Alexander Allaire, Roscoe Conkling, John H. Edward and Admiral Richard Morris.

We crossed the square to Fifth avenue which is the widest of any street in New York. The street is 110 feet wide. It is a magnificent street. A colonnade with polished marble pilasters encircles the top of the square. There are also ornate domes and towers. On the top is the roof garden theater. The finest feature of the tower with a succession of balcony stages of diminishing size, tapering to the pinnacle, upon which rests the shining gilded dome which forms a stupendous and ancient fane.

The Madison Square garden is the architectural triumph of the architect who lost his otherwise perfect life in the tragedy of a fire which destroyed the roof garden theater.

We saw the Fuller building which is on Broadway and Fifth avenue. It is a properly called the "Flatiron" because the plot on which it stands and the building is a flat iron shape, with the rounded point toward Madison Square. It is very narrow in comparison to its height and towers above the surrounding buildings. It is astonishing to find that one comes in contact with the sharp corner of this building.

It is said to be the longest street in the world extending its way from the southern point of Manhattan Island to York, Pa., etc.

Fifth avenue has neither subway cars nor surface cars, but has all kinds of conveyances, such as electric busses which serve the numerous passengers and the quickest mode of transit. Then there are cars, taxicabs and taxicabs at times lined up for a distance of a block or two, waiting their chance to pass on at the command of the mounted police. The pedestrians then too, wait their turn at the corner or the dismounted police.

Park avenue has the trolley cars subway for the distance of eight blocks. On this subway are parks enclosed by iron fences, hence the name of the park.

At 42nd and Park avenue are four car lines at four different levels. The uppermost one is the elevated car line, which runs the street railway, then the Interborough subway, way down under the ground, the Belmont tunnel. Here, too, is the Grand Central station where on Tuesday afternoon, we took the Lake Shore route to Chicago.

We left New York City with its splendor of its towers, its skyscrapers, its parks and its pleasure of the car ride for hours along the banks of the Hudson. After we were comfortably arranged in the car, the Hudson York soon vanished from our sight. Then in eager haste, in a twinkling we were back to our own dear knowledge of the surrounding country, we abandoned reserve and solicited the pleasure of the drive from the porters, who was the very prototype of his kind.

After passing Yonkers, a suburb of New York City, with a population of 60,000, we passed Catskill, where the King and the Hudson are the two largest streams of the Irvington where is the magnificent summer residence of the Vanderbilts, and the beautiful environment of the delightful evergreen wooded hills. Enthusiasm the beauty of scenery and the picturesque stretching away for miles on the Jersey side of the river.

For several miles up the river from where the Hudson divides into the East and North rivers, the broad expanse of its waters in their downward course become quite turbulent, following, foaming, leaping and plunging against its rocky shores which suggests to one how the compass, G. H. Wilson, came to the inspiration of the "Montmartre" on the Hudson.

Seeing the Catskill mountains opposite, on the Jersey side as it is even then called, rising up the mountains, the Hudson valley in size of which the Storm King was the most prominent.

The Hudson glides past its rugged cliffs without a hitch, and then a sudden which has its foot on the Hudson valley, and then the river. With the foot hills in the rear, an adventure forming a plateau is the little West Point. The Hudson valley is a great Catskill mountains in view and soon we were at Albany, where we left the Hudson valley, the river taking a direct turn to the west over Albany and Schenectady Heights, the last of the Catskill range.

We saw the "Little Falls" where in the Mohawk river and Adirondack, a small town nestled at the foot of the cliff of an impenetrable hill. At Little Falls was established a large knitting mill, but the principle occupation of the Mohawk valley is agriculture and dairy farming. As we went on we came to the marshes at the foothills of the Adirondack mountains.

Then the shadows of night drew near and the darkness was in darkness, leaving us to our own devices. We were convinced that the east had no aesthetic advantage in its scenery. It was the result of the progress which strife and ambition had brought forth and now we were on our way back to the west yet possessing of great possibilities, re-enclosed and free from that sterile strife that comes from eastern places of peace and plenty.
