MAY BE GREAT AS COMPOUND LENSES OF THE FLY.

of the Latter Reflects but Small Part of the Image

A specialist has claimed that he can with the unaided eye distinguish lines ruled in glass that are only one fiftythousandth of an inch apart, but Le eye to distinguish lines to one onethousandth of an inch.

To show how immensely superior is the sense of sight in defining single things one can try the sense of touch in comparison with it. The two points of a pair of compasses placed three inches apart on the least sensitive parts of the body will be felt as a

With the aid of the microscope the human eye can discern objects whose diameter is only about one one-hundred-and-eight-thousandth of an inch. It has been said that the eye of a fly can distinguish an object one fivemillionth of an inch in diameter.

What we designate as the eye of a fly is really a compound eye made up of numerous lenses. Of these the common house fly has something like four thousand in the two eyes. The structures of these lenses are well known, the optical part of each consisting of two lenses, which combined, form a double convex lens. That each lens acts as a separate eye can be easily proved by detaching the whole of the front of the compound eye, and by manipulation with a microscope it is not difficult to examine a photograph of other object through it. When this is done a distinct image is seen in each lens.

Carpenter has shown that each lens reflects but a small portion of the image looked at and that it requires the combined action of the 4,000 lenses of the fly to produce the same effect as that seen by the one human eye. The human eye is therefore a more perfect optical instrument than the eye of the fly.

Scientists who have given considerable attention to the investigation of compound eyes have formed no opin-ion that would lead to the conclusion that their power of vision with respect to small objects exceeds that of the simple eyes of the higher animals. The images of objects formed in the separate lenses composing the compound eye are proportionately small, and the question whether insects can see smaller objects than animals fur nished with single eyes is not a question of optics, but of the sensitiveness of the optic nerve and consequently a matter of mere conjecture.-Harper's Weekly.

The first of the largest guns ever constructed in the United States has just been removed from the workships of the Washington navy yard preparatory to being mounted on one of the dreadnoughts.

It measures 63 feet 6 inches in length and weighs sixty-five tons. It has cost $74,000, and an additional $53,000 will be expended for the mounting. The shell discharged by the gun weighs 1,400 pounds. Including the shell and powder it costs $700 for each discharge. The initial velocfty of the shell leaving the gun is 2,600 feet per second. We have reference now to a traveling salesman who was in our place of business recently. "That range over there," said he, pointing to one of our Monarch Ranges, "is the Best Malleable Range on the market today."

This statement, coming from a man who has made Stoves his life study, a man who is not in any way, financially or otherwise, interested in the Sale of the Monarch Range, is certainly worthy of consideration.

We placed Monarch Ranges in two of the most enterprising homes in this vicinity last week and want to sell eleven more by November 1st.
