Graceful Lines in a High Coiffure

NO ONE single style dominates in coiffures just now, although the French twist may be said to hold the lead in popular favor. It does this by virtue of its novelty and not because it can lay claim to being a becoming arrangement. Except when the hair is waved and the twist made very soft and rather close to the head its outlines are too severe for any but very youthful faces.

A becoming coiffure is shown in the picture given here. It is also one of the easiest to arrange. To dress it the hair is loosely waved all about the head and the front portion parted off. The back hair is combed to the top of the crown and twisted into a soft knot or puff at this position.

The hair at the center of the forehead is combed back, but so loosely confined that a strand is brought down over the forehead and pinned with small wire pins so that it forms a soft, light puff in this position.

In order to make the hair at the sides stand out softly from the face it is to be supported by small pads of crepe hair or very short and small hair rolls. It can be kept in position by "tuffing" it; but this process injures the hair finally and it is much better to use the supports, which are very light and easily pinned in.

The hair is combed loosely back over the supports and pinned in at each side of the knot at the crown. Here the ends are rolled into small puffs and pinned at either side of the knot. These puffs fill in the break between the knot and the hair at each side. The result is a coiffure of graceful lines and simple and tasteful arrangement.

A very good way for dressing thin hair has been devised with the aid of a small hair roll or supports of crepe hair. The hair must be frizzed or combed about the face by dampening and doing up on crimping pins or braiding it in tight, small braids overnight. When it is combed out in the morning the stray straight ends are curled about the face with the curling iron.

All the hair is combed back over a small hair roll, forming a low pompadour. It is tied at the back rather low on the crown and separated into four or five strands. These are rolled into puffs and pinned across the back of the head.

This hair is rather difficult to keep in place and a hair net is brought over this coiffure and fastened in many places with invisible pins. It is left very loose across the forehead when the hair is arranged in a short side part, a dip, or in any line about the face that best becomes the wearer. In this style no extra pieces of hair are used, but the hair roll as a support is an essential. The coiffure will not be a success without it.

The Popular Effects in Veilings

THE new veilings that are popular are those that are simple in design. They consist of a novelty mesh, with border of chenille dots, or all-over effects of dots on a fine mesh.

It is in the management of these two features, the mesh and the dot, that the designers have made the wonderful variety in patterns that are shown in veiling departments. It happens that different sizes and shapes in the mesh make the veils more or less becoming to the individual wearer. It would be impossible to describe the varieties in which veilings are woven. Nets are designed with the mesh showing outlines in squares, hexagons, circles, triangles and every variation of these.

If one studies the dots they will be found to vary as much as the meshes in shape. There are small circular dots, squares, double squares, diamonds and tiny floral patterns. Also there are combinations of these on the same mesh, in unending variety.

Veils are worn in three widths. In the larger cities just now the nose veil is best liked. It is usually of plain mesh bordered with chenille dots, "dots," of course, including all the figures mentioned. The nose veil extends from the hat to the tip of the nose and is worn with turbans and toques.

Long veils, like those shown in the picture, are bordered with a lace pattern at the edge and worn with either small or large hats. Except when bordered with crepe and worn for mourning, they are thrown back of the face.

The face veil, reaching from the hat to the chin, remains the best liked, generally, of all veils. It is an inconspicuous affair this season, but almost indispensable. It keeps the hair about the edge of the face below the hat in place and adds to the neat appearance of its wearer.

Veils should be tried on and the most becoming mesh or arrangement of dots selected by each individual wearer.

Gelatin Frosting.

Dissolve large pinch of gelatin in six tablespoonfuls boiling water; strain and thicken with sugar and flavor with lemon.

Sanitary Bag.

If you wish a really sanitary work bag use a fancy guest towel. Double the towel so that the ends come together and seam the two sides. This will form a bag. When the towel is doubled it is doubled with the right side of the towel in. When the seams at the sides are made, the resulting bag is turned with the right side out and the seam in. Buttonholes or eyelets are made all about the top of the bag, and through these is run the double draw-string ribbon. It is well to have several of these little bags, so that one may always have a fresh one when the one in use becomes soiled.

To Make Fudge Creamy.

Many people spoil fudge by beating it as soon as it is taken from the fire. This causes the candy to become granulated. If the beating is postponed until the chocolate syrup is tepid the result will be well worth the slight delay. The fudge will be velvety and creamy, the kind that "melts in the mouth."

HELPS TO SOLVE A PROBLEM

Having Cottage Like This to Live in Means That Neither of Them Will Be Anxious to Seek New Job—Look at it and at Its Cost.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.

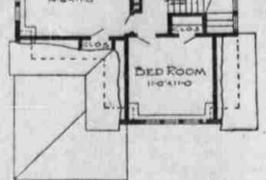

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

A wealthy farmer solved the farm help problem by building very pretty cottage houses for his men to live in. As an experiment, about two years ago he selected a very attractive spot in the orchard just a few yards back from the main road, and without consulting anyone, built a cottage like the one illustrated.

It is small, but large enough for the purpose. It contains a very pleasant and he said that woman could not be driven out of the little house. She made the remark to one of the neighbors that she had never had the use of a regular bathroom before, and she never would live without one again.

Now, the fact is this house cost about one hundred dollars more than one of the plain, awkward affairs that most farmers build for their married help. The owner of such a house gets the man he wants, while the owner of

Second Floor Plan.

A poor house gets the man he doesn't want, and loses him as soon as he can do better elsewhere.

One great improvement in this house is the form of triple window used in the larger rooms, which admits so much light and air when you want it, and looks much better than any other window that has ever been built for a small low-cost house. Such window frames may be bought ready to nail right into the framework and really cost less than some others that require more hand work. It is another way of making machinery the living room, a splendid dining room and a kitchen downstairs, and they are all well arranged, both for looks and convenience, and a very neat stairway makes connection with the cellar, kitchen, living room and upstairs and does it without eating very much into the space required for the rooms.

For some reason farmers have never paid much attention to the houses built for help, and the universal howl from all parts of the country is that good men will not work on farms. When you look into some of the houses they are expected to live in you can readily see why. It costs very little more to build a house like this planned with conveniences and made attractive both outside and in, than to put up an awkward-looking shack that any self-respecting woman would be ashamed to live in. If a woman is discontented the man is almost absolutely certain to look for another job before very long.

When the farmer in question got this beautiful little cottage finished he happened to meet the very man work instead of depending so much on hand labor.

The projections for the wide windows in the dining room and living room are built up with the framework and the labor is very little more. Of course you cannot add an extra foot to any part of a room without costing something, but it is quite possible to put on extensions of this kind that are worth a dozen times their extra cost. It marks the difference between a well-planned, well-built dwelling and the slipshod affairs that are altogether too common.

A little house like this containing five rooms with the steep roof, neat gable ends and fashionable front porch is an ornament to a village lot as well as the farm. It contains a great deal of convenience in proportion to its size, and there are no small uncomfortable little rooms such as we find in most small low-cost houses.

HE CAUGHT HUERTA GROUCHY

Spanish Newspaper Man Retreated From an Interview Under a Shower of Oaths.

Following is a literal translation of a news story in La Gaceta del Norte, a Balboa (Spain) morning paper, telephoned from Santander by its "own correspondent":

"The local reporters today (August 27) called on General Huerta, ex-president of the republic of Mexico. Questioned by the newspapermen, he refused to say anything about recent happenings in Mexico. Asked concerning the department of Spaniards in Mexico during his rule, he replied that they had conducted themselves exceedingly well.

"Upon the reporter's intimating to Huerta that the Spaniards in Mexico had not received much consideration from him as president of the republic, the ex-president became terribly angry and let out a string of oaths and vile words.

"Whereupon your correspondent, protesting, abandoned the interview. The other reporters likewise condemned the actions and manners of Huerta.

"The Mexican consul has made apologies, begging that the intemperate impetuosity of General Huerta be overlooked."

General Huerta and family have now gone to Cadiz.

Dogs in Hot Countries.

Dogs, probably the earliest of domesticated animals, when transferred to a tropical country, such as central Africa, lose in a few generations most of the characteristics they have acquired in Europe, and revert more and more to the type of the jackal and the wolf. Then their ears, whatever their breed, tend to become pointed, their coats turn sandy or rufous, and their bark becomes a howl. Some attempt has been made to show that this is the result of disease and resembles the effect of malaria on the human constitution. Yet the Egyptian dog of Pharaonic times possessed, as is seen by the monuments, these very characteristics; and as he was certainly domesticated before the European animal, it is probable that these are original features of the race.
