Looking Backward.

Sioux City Journal, October 22, 1895: It is said by some of the Democrats of Dakota county that too many candidates on their ticket were chosen from Jackson, and the wise ones say if any defection occurs in the ranks that will be the cause. Philo Graves, a former resident of Sioux City, who went to San Diego a few years ago, is in town looking after his property interests. Mr. Graves is buying a little butter and shipping it to California, where a roll weighing 14 pounds is sold for 90 cents. A farmer in the city from Dakota county says the farmers are taking advantage of the present fine weather and much corn is being husked. He said a great many cattle are coming in from Sioux City and Omaha markets to be fed, but did not think as many cattle would be fattened this year in Dakota county as last. At present, he said, cattlemen are holding off for the late market. An attempt has been made by the Combination Bridge company to estimate the probable receipts of the Pacific Short Line bridge. The only basis for an estimate is the receipts of the pontoon bridge. This bridge was a gold mine during the palmy days of Covington from 1888 to 1891. Then a dividend was declared at the end of every week. The figures of the Iowa and Nebraska company's for the poorest one of those years show that an average amount of $157,50 a day was collected for tolls. This past month, even when the travel has been light and with nothing at Covington to attract the night hawks from Sioux City, about $56 a day has been collected. It is expected the new bridge will beat the palmy days' record. The street car feature is additional, travel on the big structure will be safer, and Covington will be on the map again.
