It is wonderful how the democratic "pie-counter" brigade are mourning over the demise of the bull-moose party and the get-together spirit manifested by the republicans. You would naturally think it was the p. e. b.'s, funeral,—and maybe it is.

Among the noteworthy ideas presented by Senator Shumway in his speech in the public forum, we call attention particularly to two. While paying high tribute to the educational accomplishments of the past, he pointed out that the time the (now) dead languages secured their hold in schools they were a necessary medium to acquiring an education. The literature, law, and science were written chiefly in Latin or Greek. Now the situation is very different. The same reason would emphasize the study of English in American schools.

Vocational training was highly commended and the need of it emphasized. Of this Mr. Shumway could speak with certainty, as he has been somewhat of a pioneer in the movement. In fact he became generally known throughout the entire state through the Shumway Bill, providing for teaching of agricultural subjects in the high schools. In a review of the educations of the past he gave them full credit for what they had accomplished, but pointed out that the present day needs are vastly different. Present day efficiency is what is demanded.

The schools should meet this demand. Manual training, domestic science, agriculture—in short, vocational training—should have a large place in our public school curriculum. Such courses can be arranged to give a thorough practical training and still include culture education. Mr. Shumway has the good fortune to see his cherished ideas being put into operation. The present trend of school curricula is strongly toward incorporating vocational training. Study, observation and effort on the part of Mr. Shumway for more than a quarter of a century has had a large influence in furthering this movement in Nebraska.—Wakefield Republican.

Why It Costs More to Furnish Telephone Service in a Large Town Than in a Small One

Telephones usually increase in number as a town grows, and the more telephones there are the more opportunities there are for the use of each telephone.

The more calls there are from each telephone the more it costs to operate that telephone and the more wear there is on the equipment.

Also the equipment per telephone is more expensive in larger places. For example, in a town of 10,000 people the more intricate and complicated switchboard that has to be used costs nearly five times as much per subscriber connected as in a town of 1,000 people.

Subscribers in the town of 10,000 people live on an average three times as far from the central office as in the smaller place. Also subscribers move more in large centers, and these moves cost money.

A more exacting grade of service is required in larger places, which increases the operating costs. Again wages, taxes and rents are higher as a town grows larger. Then, too, in larger places we are generally asked to place our wires underground in cables, which is very expensive.

These are some of the reasons why telephone rates cannot be as low in large towns as in small ones.
