Farm Notes.

Issued by the University of Nebraska
College of Agriculture.

SEED CORN GOOD

Most of the seed corn grown in Nebraska in 1916 will probably grow well, agronomy specialists at the University of Nebraska say. However, some samples have been tested that gave a low per cent of germination.

Where corn is still in the ear, farmers will probably not have difficulty in picking out satisfactory seed. When purchasing seed corn, one should require a germination test.

Use varieties that are well adapted to the locality is recommended. All experimental evidence as well as the experience of farmers indicate that there is some risk in bringing seed corn from long distances, as such corn often yields less than corn which has been grown in the locality for some time. For that reason it is advisable to obtain locally grown seed.

CHOOSING WALL PAPER

Harmony, unobtrusiveness, and lightness—these are three cardinal points to be kept in mind in selecting wall paper, according to the head of the home economics department of the state university.

"Each room should have a predominating color,—one that will harmonize with adjoining rooms," she says. "Wall paper should be inconspicuous in color and design, since wall surfaces are large and since they serve as backgrounds for pictures and furniture. Such papers are restful, and they harmonize readily with various colors and designs of room furnishings.

"Unless your room is very light, do not use dark paper as it absorbs too much light. Dark walls cause large light bills."

EXPECT BIG CROP OF MOTH

University Farm horticulturists are preaching a new doctrine of "preparedness"—preparedness against the onslaught of a big army of codling moth which are expected to attack orchards about May 1 to 10. Large numbers of codling moth came thru the winter in good condition. Orchard owners are advised to get spraying machinery and materials ready to cope with the pest. Bulletin No. 158, Why, When and How to Spray, will be sent free upon application to Bulletin Clerk, University farm, Lincoln.

CONTROLLING BACTERIAL GROWTH

Bacterial growth in milk may be controlled by keeping it at low temperatures according to experiments conducted by the dairy husbandry department of the University of Nebraska. Milk held at a temperature of 32 degrees Fahrenheit for 10 hours contained 3,300 bacteria per cubic centimeter; at 50 degrees, 11,580; at 60 degrees, 15,120; at 70 degrees, 188,000; at 80 degrees, 2,631,000; and at 90 degrees, 4,426,000. This shows the necessity for using cooling tanks in warm weather.

SKIM MILK FOR CHICKS

Mortality is reduced and gains are increased by feeding sour skim milk to chicks, is the opinion of poultry experts at the University of Nebraska. Chicks should be given all the milk they will drink, beginning with the first feed they get after hatching. For forcing growth, milk should be fed in the wet mash.

SELECTING FURNITURE

In selecting a piece of furniture for the living room, dining room, or bedroom, one should see that its color and design harmonize with other permanent pieces in the room. It should be well constructed, for poorly-built furniture is expensive at any price. Avoid highly polished furniture. Unless the room is very large, do not buy massive pieces.

CARE OF STRAWBERRIES

Early April is a good time to rake straw off the strawberries. It may be piled up between the rows so that plants may be covered easily when frost threatens. This mulch will also keep the fruit off the ground and prevent decay. If the bed is an old one, the oldest plants may be removed to give the younger ones a chance to produce more fruit.

Farm Profits

Do favorable or unfavorable climatic conditions determine them? Yes, but more often the proper application or misapplication of generally recognized farming principles evolved by successful farmers and breeders and the government experiment stations: Farmer and Breeder is a compendium of the best ideas and successful methods employed by successful farmers and breeders. It is issued semi-monthly at Sioux City, Ia., and deals with farming conditions as they are here found. Its subject matter is strong and appetizing both to the farmer and stockman. You want to farm profitably—every intelligent farmer does. Farmer and Breeder will help you to do this and more too.
