Barley Cheaper Than Corn

At the present time barley is sell ng on the market for about $2.25 per hundred pounds in comparison to a price of $3 per hundred pounds for corn. The question is being asked as to which is the better buy at these prices. Experimental work has shown consistently that barley, when gruond and soaked, is almost the equivalent of corn for fattening animals. On this basis with the relatively wide spread in price which we have now barley could easily be pronounced the cheaper feed of the two, and it certainly would seem the part of wis dom to utilize it where possible in the ration of animals, especially hogs which are being made ready for the market. Experimental work has shown that the gain is increased materially by grinding and soaking the barley before feeding.

WESTERN CAN CLANS GATHER

Many States to Participate in Patriotic Contests at Interstate Fair-Conservation Vital.

With America, like all the other great nations of the world, submitting with fine self-denial to numerous and growing restrictions on food consumption, the management of the Interstate Live Stock Fair, which will be held at Sioux City September 16, 17, 18, 19, 20 and 21, is expecting that one of the most important, certainly one of the most interesting of all exposition features this year will be those relating to food production and its equally vital corollary, food conservation.

Probably the most interesting phases in all this great movement are those represented by the work of the children of the country through the myriad clubs organized with the approval and under the guidance of government experts. As these experts have pointed out in communications to Secretary Morton, of the big exposition at Sioux City, the boys and girls of America are engaged by thousands and tens of thousands in a mighty "children's crusade" which is almost as romantic and many times more practical than the famous children's crusade of medieval history. These modern child :rusaders, both boys and girls, numbering it is estimated a full million in America, are working through their potato clubs, their poul try clubs, their live stock clubs and their baking and canning clubs to produce such supplies of food as the world has never seen, and to conserve such supplies with a better skill and completeness than a fev years ago was dreamed of.

Last year for the first time the In terstate Fair became a meeting ground of contesting boys and girls who in the state contests of this section had won their championships. Government representatives supervised and directed the contests, and expressed the greatest satisfaction with results derived. This year, largely at the suggestion of these official men who foresaw for the Interstate Fair a peculiar field for this endeavor, instead of four states being represented there will be at least 10, and the contests between state champion teams will assume the nature of a sectional affair representing the whole northwest. Partly this vastly enlarged showing will be due to the liberal premiums hung up by the Fair for baby beef and pig feeding clubs, as well as for all varieties of war foods. But more important even than that influence, in the opinion of the fair directors, is the widespread realization among all people that the world is crying for food; that it must have more bread, more meat, more vegetables and more fruit if millions are not to starve; and that on the great agricultural population of this section, especially, devolves the responsibility of preventing so terrible a catastrophe.

It has been arranged, by co-operation between the Fair officials and the federal and state agricultural agencies to focus all possible attention on this part of the Fair. Supervision will be in the hands of a larger corps of experts than ever before. The number of entries is far in excess of any previously recorded.

Keep on Canning

"Keep canning, sugar or no sugar," says the United States Department of Agriculture. If you can't get sugar enough for home canning put up your fruit without it. The products will keep perfectly until a time when more sugar is available or until a sugar substitute program has been worked out. Fruits put up in this way are excellent for pie filling and salads and may be used in deserts, puddings, ices and punches. In canning fruit without sugar, can the product the day it is picked.
