WHERE IS YOUR DOG?
 (From Farmer and Breeder.)
 O, where is your wandering dog to-night, while you sweetly slumber and sleep, is he safe at home under lock and key, or out killing a neighbor's sheep? Do you always give him his daily bread, or must he hook that from the hens, and does he forage around for his eats, in the neighbor's pastures and pens? Is he out with a troupe of friends, polluting the street and the lawn, or busily digging in somebody's yard, or yowling from darkness to dawn? Does he ride around on your auto seat, where your child or an orphan should be; or is he asleep on the parlor rug, or scratching and biting a flea? Does he work each day for his bed and board, and never do mischief or harm, while faithfully watching the kids and house, and all of the stock on the farm? If he's not worth while in some useful way, consider the cur to the buried boswomans and end his raids on the sheep! If you don't attend to this job at once, you may have a big bill to pay, for your dog may join in a killing bee, when you are from home some day. Or worse than that, he may go raving mad, bringing death to people and stock, yet all the dogs in all the world can't pay for a person or flock. And food is too precious to throw away, on a vicious, worrying hound, while wool and mutton are needed by all, here at home and the world around. So do, as you can, protect the sheep and have them increase and grow fat, to clothe and to feed all the people well, for there's right and sense in that. Then here's to the doom of the guilty dog, dig deeply his dishonored grave, and let no one mourn when he's put away, since his death means that lives we save.

HAIRLESS PIGS.
 In every section of the hog belt, some pigs are each year born without hair. Such pigs live but a short time, if at all. Aside from a lack of hair, and unusually thin hoofs, these pigs are well developed, showing that they have been well nourished. It has been observed that such pigs are more frequently born from gilts than from old sows. In several states this trouble has become a menace to hog raising. Montana seems to be the worst hurt as it is estimated that their loss sums from 100,000 to 1,000,000 pigs annually.
 Wisconsin bulletin No. 297, issued last September, gives the result of several years work done by that station.
 They observed that in the hairless pigs there is a thickened condition of the neck. The sows also suffered from enlarged thyroid glands, but their fleshy condition does not make this so noticeable.
 Studies of goiters in the human race show an enlargement of the thyroid gland. Such conditions are found to interfere with hair and nail development. In simple forms of the human goiter it has been found that the use of iodine will correct the trouble.
 The fact that hairless pigs come from sows suffering from goiter suggested to the experimenters a possible cure in the use of iodine. A few years' work along this line has proven that the malady can be successfully combated by giving the sow during her entire gestation period 10 grains (about one-third of an ounce) of potassium iodine per 100 pounds of feed. This should be made as fine as flour and mixed with the feed. They have found no way of telling before hand how to determine whether or not a sow has goiter, but where hairless pigs have occurred on the farm it is a cheap insurance to prevent its appearance by feeding this compound. At the present high price for this chemical it will not cost more than 25 cents per sow during the entire gestation period.
 While it does not always prevent goiter, it has been found that the feeding of one-fourth of the ration with some roughage, as alfalfa or clover in a very large measure will correct the trouble. But do not depend on this if you had hairless pigs last year.

TO KEEP EGG YIELD HIGH.
 The Extension Service of the University of Nebraska College of Agriculture gives the following suggestions for keeping the egg layers busy: Do not overcrowd. Do not keep fowls in close, air-tight and ill-ventilated houses. Do not keep fowls in houses infested with lice and mites. Do not fuss with or dope hens with concoctions labeled to make them lay. The best laying medicine or tonic is early hatching, care to keep the hens growing, and the use of common sense.

Business Methods On The Farm
 To meet a desire on the part of farmers that they have aid in farm accounting, organization and marketing, special courses will be given along such lines at the University of Nebraska beginning January 27, and continuing four weeks. Other short courses will be given in dairying, poultry raising, animal husbandry, automobiles, tractors, etc. One hundred and twenty-five farmers are now taking a short course in automobiles, tractors and trucks. The short courses are now open to any one.

Beacom's Immuned Duroc Sows
At Public Auction
40 - Mammoth Bred Sows - 40
Saturday, Feb. 1, '19
 BEGINNING AT 1 O'CLOCK
 SALE WILL BE HELD ON FARM 2 MILES NORTHEAST OF HUBBARD—In My New Hog Barn
 I will sell 40 of the best sows that will go through a sale ring this winter. These are in prime condition to bring forth litters that will possess vigor and size in a marked degree, having been fed a balanced ration of corn, meat meal, and oats out of a self-feeder. A great many of them are sired by Grand Model 16th, that great show and breeding boar. He sired the 3rd prize gilt, also the 3rd prize litter and stood third himself in a class of 14 good age boars at the Inter State Fair at Sioux City. I will sell the 3rd prize gilt, also the 3rd prize litter, and many other tops. These sows are bred to Grand Model 16th, the largest Golden Model bred boar living. He sires them big, high and smooth. King Quality, I believe this is the largest and longest fall yearling living, he would weigh if in show condition right at 800 lbs. I guess that is big enough, he was third at Sioux City.
 I believe you will agree with me that this is the best lot ever sold from this herd, and I do not know how I could praise the offering higher. They are bred right, big, stretchy and vigorous, in prime condition to bring forth litters that will make lots of money for their owners. Come to this sale and see these sows, also the herd boars, whether you wish to buy or not.
