DAKOTA COUNTY HERALD, DAKOTA CITY, NEBRASKA.

recommending it to other expectant mothers. Before taking it, somedays I suffered with neuralgia so badly that I thought I could not live, but after taking three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was entirely relieved of neuralgia, 1 had gained in strength and was able to go around and do all my housework. My baby when seven months old weighed 19 pounds and I feel better than I have for a long time. I never had any medicine do me so much good."-Mrs. PEARL MONYHAN, Mitchell, Ind.

BE

Mitchell, Ind. Good health during maternity is a most important factor to both mother and child, and many letters have been received by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., telling of health restored during this trying period by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vege-table Compound table Compound.

Some people forget that a failure is man who has at least tried.

To keep clean and healthy take Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They regulate Byer, bowels and stomach. Adv.

"So dark and yet so light," said the funny man as he looked at a ton of coal the driver had just delivered.

Cuticura Soothes Baby Rasilea. That itch and burn with hot baths of Cuticura Soap followed by gentle anointings of Cuticura Ointment. Nothing better, purer, sweeter, especially if a little of the fragrant Cuticura Talcum is dusted on at the finish. 25c each everywhere.-Adv.

The Difference.

"Do you treat your cook like one of the family?"

"Dear me, no! She wouldn't stay with us a day if we didn't treat her like company."

The Similitude.

"A star who wants a good position is in much the condition of a lookingglass.

"What is that?"

"Her claims do not get much looking into unless she has plenty of back-

ALL REPORT OF A SUBJECT AND

THANKS TO DUANE, DAPHNE GETS THE CHANCE TO BE-COME AN ACTRESS-IF SHE CAN MAKE GOOD.

Synopsis .- Clay Wimburn, a young New Yorker on a visit to Cleveland, meets pretty Daphne Kip, whose brother is in the same office with Clay in Wall street. After a whirlwind courtship they become engaged, Clay buys an engagement ring on credit and returns to New York, Daphne agrees to an early marriage, and after extracting from her money-worried father what she regards as a sufficient sum of money for the purpose she goes to New York with her mother to buy her trousseau. Daphne's brother, Bayard, has just married and left for Europe with his bride, Leila. Daphne and her mother install themselves in Bayard's flat. Wimburn introduces Daphne and her mother to luxurious New York life. Daphne meets Tom Duane, man-about-town, who seems greatly attracted to her. Daphne accidentally discovers that Clay is penniless, except for his salary. Baynard and his wife return to New York unexpectedly. The three women set out on a shopping excursion and the two younger women buy expensive gowns, having them charged to Bayard. Bayard is furious over the expense, seeing hard times ahend. Daphne, indignant, declares she will earn her own living and breaks her engagement with Clay.

CHAPTER IX.

that his pressed lips touched her hair. She flung backward and thrust him away and broke from his hold. "Agh !" she groaned. "I suppose I leserve the insult-for trusting you." "I didn't intend it for an insult." He followed her with pleading arms.

She backed away and found herself in a corner, flushed, furious, at hay. "How dare you?" she stormed, and thought with nausea how often the phrase had been used and with what typocrisy.

It seemed to fall familiarly on his ear, for he laughed comfortably. "How can I help it?"

"If you touch me I'll-I'll hit you." He paused, stared deep into her

- yes. "Do you mean it?" "Of course I mean it."
- "I'm sorry," he sighed. "But won't you let me explain?" "You don't have to. It's all my fault for inviting you here."

"Ob, no, I beg you not to think that I'm such a cad.' "Please go !"

"All right!" he murmured, and left the room

She heard his stick rattle as he took It from the umbrella jar. She thought: "There goes my opportunity-my ca-Well, let it go! It wasn't worth ant.

false it is, or how true; no man can know-but there is a tradition that Daphne bent her head so quickly every woman expects every man she meets to offer her an insult-that's the technical term-as soon as they are alone.

> "That feeling is what women are going to run into every time they try to force their way into business. It will die out, I suppose, to a certain extent, as you crowd into our field. It will be one of the last privileges you'll lose. You're already permitted to stand up in street cars and go out after dark alone. By and by you will have to make your advances to the men yourselves in the frankest manner, instead of subtly as now."

> Daphne broke in coldly, "That will be a very welcome day to most of us." Somehow it did not sound convincing to her. There was grave conviction, however, in his response:

"It will be a mighty welcome day to us poor men, Miss Kip. For most men haven't the faintest desire to spoon with women. It's hard enough for some of them to keep their own ressed. Then there's another thingif I'm not boring you-I haven't made as long a speech since I was a schoolboy and recited 'Spartacus to the manner changed slightly and Daphne's Gladiators."

woman doesn't often get the chance slowly closing in around her like the emotional little man, worn to shreds studying and flung away ambition, and had said that he might have a chance to place her at once if she could come to his office without delay. Opportunity bouncing out at her like i jack-in-the-box alarmed her. But she faced it pluckily. She put on her hat with trembling hands and went down in the elevator with Duane.

They went up in an elevator at one ide of the lobby of the theater and stepped out at Reben's office door. A number of somber and despondent persons of a theatrical complexion were waiting there also, the wretched Lazaruses of art.

Duane spoke to a respectful office boy, who disappeared through a door and returned to beckon him in. With heart bounding high and bubbling at her throat Daphne entered the theatrical world by one of its most gilded portals.

The great Reben sat bulkily behind have to give a performance at short an ornate table-desk and dismissed a still more ornate stenographer with might come any day."

nod as he rose to greet Duane. Duane did the honors: "Mr. Reben, want to present you to Miss Kip, Miss Daphne Kip."

his eyes were even more enthusiastic The more you earn the more I make. than his words. Daphne was at her superlative degree and anxiety gave week." her a wistfulness that was appealing to Reben. Women's charms and wist- I'll try." fulnesses made up a large part of his wares in trade.

"Have you had any experience?" "None."

"Studied elocution?"

"Never. I never spoke a piece in my life.' "Good! Amateur theatricals?" "Never. I never seemed to care for them."

"Better yet! What makes you think you want to act now?"

"Money. I want to earn moneyget rich." "I see," said Reben, and fell into a profound meditation, studying Daphne searchingly.

Duane seized the opportunity to rise and say: "Well, I'll leave you two to- for all the attention he paid her. She sweethearts and wives sufficiently (a- gether to talk terms. It would be in-that it was blurred in her vision.

Miss Kip is going to be." He had no sooner gone than Reben's at her word.

Reben backed away and stared at

She went on with the Dunne system to put them to the test.

somewhere else."

"You bet-er-indeed I do. How often does an understudy play ?" "As rarely as possible." Daphne's joy turned to lead.

Reben added : "But we don't pay by performances. I'll pay you twentyfive a week. You wanted money. There's a little of it for a start. Do you want it?"

"Will it lead to anything better?" "It might."

"Am I to understudy Miss Kemble?" "Yes, and all the other women roles."

"And when do you suppose I'll get a chance to play Miss Kemble's part? Soon?"

"Never, I hope."

"That's encouraging !" "If Miss Kemble fell ill we'd ordinarily refund the money, because she's the star. But sometimes we might notice. Chances in the other parts

"And you'll give me a better chance when you can?"

"Indeed I will. If you have the gift, the sooner I find it out and the harder Reben greeted her with suavity and I work it the more money I make. I'd like to pay you ten thousand a

"I'd like to have you. All right,

He pressed a button on his desk once, then twice. The office boy appeared, followed by the stenographer. Reben said to the boy: "Is Mr. Batterson here? Send him to me." To the stenographer he said: "Fill out a contract for Miss Kip-Miss- What's the first name? Miss Daphne Kip. Salary, twenty-five. Make it a threeyear contract."

Reben motioned her absently to her chair and said, rather for Duane's sake than for hers, she felt: "Sit down, won't you, till the contracts come? and pardon me if I-"

He finished the phrase by the deed. The office routine went on and Daphne might have been the chair she sat in, felt rather ungallantly ignored. Still, delicate for me to know just how rich she had asked to be treated on a business basis. He was taking her but with no success. She said "How

Before the contracts were ready no result except to render the phrases courage vanished. Reben paced the Mr. Batterson appeared. He was one meaningless gibberish. "Go on, please," said Daphne. "A floor as he talked. His path kept of Reben's stage managers, a worried, rescue his child. She always called on him in an emergency and he always responded.

Leila came home eventually full of cossip and triumph. Her Datah gown had made a tremendous success; the other women wanted to murder her. Mrs. Kip broke in on her alconicles with the dismal announcement of Daphne's new insanity. Bella was almost as hitter in opposition as Mrs. Kip had been, but from quite another motive. Loila had aristowate imputses and looked forward to social splendors. She would gain ue help from the fact that her hudowd's sister was a theatrical struggler.

Daphne escaped an odiens battle with her by referring to the need of close study, and retreated into her own room, locking her mother out.

She stayed there, repeating her lines over and over and trying to remember the action that went with them as Miss Kemble had played it. She had a quick memory, but the intonation of the lines gave her extraordinary officulty.

She remembered one of Miss Kemble's most delicious effects. She came on the stage unannounced and, pausing in the doorway, smiled whimsically and said. "How do you do?" That was all-just "How do you do?" But she uttered it so deliciously that a ripple of joy ran through the audience. Daphne tried to master the trick of it, do you do?" in dozens of ways, with

The Next Day Batterson Telephoned Her That He Had Called a Rehearsal With the Company.

Daphne flung down the part she was went out to tell the family that she

His Reason.

Ascum-There goes poor old Peck. I understand he took up dentistry after he was married. Strange thing to do, wasn't it?

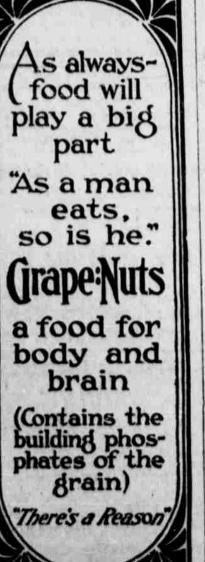

Tellum-Not at all. He told me he wanted to be in a position to do all the talking himself at least part of the day.

Real Grievance.

Harriet, whose father owns a grocery store and whose mother often assists him on busy days, was crying quite hard when her father and mother came in from the store the other evening.

"What are you crying about?" asked her mother as she picked up her knitting, and seated herself by the child. The sobs did not cease, and it was only under threat of punishment that Harriet replied :

"Well, you just help daddy in the store all day, and then knit all night, and you don't never pet me any more at all."

the price!" Duane appeared at the door again to say: "Oh, by the way, that introduction to Mr. Reben. Do you still want It?" "No, thank you, not from you. Good-

by. He bowed farewell, then changed his mind, entered the room and sat down, and motioned her to a seat as if it were his house.

"Miss Kip, may I say one word to you? I don't pretend to understand you women people. I'm not sure now just how sincere you are, just how much of a ninny you may think me for being rebuffed so easily. Experience is no guide. But-well-anywaywhat I wanted to say is this-there is bother a woman unwilling to be bothered if he could only be certain that he was really bothering her. Do I make myself clear?"

leave you a bit of advice. You say

"Not in the least." "Well, then, I give up. But I must you want to earn money. If you do,

And May | Arranue for You to Reben?"

on the stage or fn any other business you will meet a lot of men who will feel it their duty to try to kiss you at the first opportunity. It's not only because you are so pretty, for I really believe the homeliest girls get the most kisses. Perhaps it's because they're not so particular-but, anythat they try to kiss women, but because they're obliging. There is an

of hearing a man tell the truth about walls in Poe's story. these things."

Her sarcasm chilled him a little, but said. "You have somewhat the same he went on:

"I just want to say this-it's an old play. That may be your line. I can't man's advice to a young woman go- tell. Of course I don't know how well for a job he brings references, and Kemble is great, but she comes of an they are investigated; or he answers old theatrical family. Of course you a lot of questions, and he is given a trial. Or when two men meet in a for you are very beautiful, Miss Kip, club or elsewhere they shake hands. very. Let me see your eyes!"

That handshake itself is a kind of investigation of character. They learn each other's politics and religion and prejudices as soon as they can.

"So when a man meets a woman he is apt to be thrown with a good deal he is apt to say, 'What sort is she?' But the thing that annoys a hardly any man that would even man most about having to do business with a woman is the fear that he will either compromise her or disappoint her. That's the first problem to get out of the way; and there's nothing easier for a woman to do than to convince a man that she doesn't want him to try to flirt with her-if she doesn't." Daphne cried, "In heaven's name, tell me how it's done." "The way to convince him is to be convinced yourself. If you're sincere he'll know it."

"But I was sincere with you, and you didn't know it."

rebuff and he stammered, "Why, I-"I didn't know it at first, but I soon did-I think-and now that's what I'm | I meant no harm." driving at all this long while. If you're going into business competition with of treatment: "I know you didn't. You men, play fair. Every now and then meant to be polite, but you don't have one of them, as soon as he finds him to be so polite to me. I don't expect self alone with you, will be polite it and I don't like it." enough to insult you. But the average "All right, all right !" Reben growled man will let you alone if you'll let pacing the floor again, but in a conhim alone. Suppose he does make a stantly receding path. He did not mistaken advance, if you could be speak. He felt that he had made a sensible enough not to get mad, not to fool of himself, and he was embarfeel besmirched, but just take it as rassed.

a matter of course and say frankly: Daphne was so frightened with her 'No, thanks, I'm not interested. I unsuccess that she got to her feet, sayderstand you perfectly, but you needn't ing: "I suppose this means that you bother,' or something like that, and don't want me to work for you. It's say it honestly, the rest would be plain true, then, what they say about the sulling. stage."

"And now, if you'll forgive me for alking your arm off and if you'll prove I never see most of my people except t by letting me help you, Fil promise never to kiss you or try to till-till never spoken to three-quarters of 'em. you ask me to.

Duphne laughed refreshedly at his impudence, and he laughed, as well as don't have to make love to me. You he might. And they shook hands with comradeship.

"And may I arrange for you to meet Reben ?"

"I hate to ask you now. I've no right to trouble you. But I'm terribly auxious to get a job."

one. "You're awfully kind," she said, and ied him to the telephone. She felt that it would be indelicate way, it's not because men are villains to listen, and went back into the living room of the apartment. There Duane joined her in a few moments old superstition-I don't know how with the terrifying naws that Reben you want it. Do you?"

with his task of stimulating and cor-"You look like Miss Kemble," he recting the emotions by which others earned their wages and fame.

temperament. You like her style of Reben introduced him to Daphne and explained her new office. Batterson seemed none too well pleased with ing into business: when a man asks you can act. Perhaps you never could. the news that Daphne was ignorant of stage work to the last degree. He had found it hard enough to make the have one great capital-your beauty; experienced actors read their lines as they must be read and keep on reading them so. To teach this dramatic He had a right to ask if he were infant how to walk and talk was an going to hire her eyes, but she looked unwelcome labor. up cravenly, for the burly satrap was He took Daphne into his office and leaning over her. His left hand was on the arm of the chair, his right on the back of it. His left hand was grad- heavenward in his swift impatience. band. ually enveloping hers. It was a fat, He explained them with a vinegary hot hand, and his face was so close gentleness. He talked to her of the canons of interpretation. He walked through her scenes and spoke her lines Then she remembered Duane's words. She controlled herself enough for her again and again and yet again.

But somehow he could not teach her. She pretended to look coldly into He tried everything but beating her. He flattered her, wheedled her, Reben's face, and she said, with a parodied, satirized, rebuked her, and brave show of caim: "Mr. Reben, I didn't come here to flirt with you and occasionally he cursed her. She did not rebel even against his profaulty, don't intend to. I came here for a job as an actress. If this sort of thing because she had no confidence in herself to support her resistance. She is a necessary part of the job I'll go felt that she was iar worse than he said she was when he said she was worst. She used all her funds of resher. He was rendered foolish by her olution in keeping from throwing down the part and running away in tears. She had none left for asserting her right to politeness. Once Daphne was out in the street again and released from the ordeal of pleasing Batterson, youth and ambition brought hope back again. Broadway at twilight was athrob with enthusiasm and she caught zest from the crowds. She was going home to study, carrying her little set of textbooks like a schoolgirl. But she felt the wings of conquest fledging at her ankles or the wheel of fortune spinning under her toes.

Her very first effort had succeeded. She was a woman with a salary. She would be no longer a parasite on any man. She had a career and a business

"Nonsense! Of course not! Rot! as well as the best of them.

Her mother was at home alone. at rehearsals or performances. I've Lella had gone from that tea party to another to which Mrs. Kip was not If you want a job you can have it, and invited. Daphne's mother greeted her no concessions are necessary. You with relief. She told her news with a gush of enthusiasm. It left Mrs. Kip cold, very cold,

She was a plous, church-going woman, Mrs. Kip. She had always looked upon the theater as a training school thrilled with gratitude to Duane for for the still lower regions. She went introducing her to this marvelous op- to plays occasionally, but usually with a feeling of dissipation and worldliportunity and for the wisdom of his ness. Besides it was one thing to see plays and another to act them. Reben said: "The general understudy of the Kemble company has Daphne tried to reason her mother grown tired of waiting for a chance out of her backwoods prejudices, but to appear in public. She's quitting me she only frightened her the more. Mrs. this week for a small part in a road Kip retired to her room to write an company. You can have her place if urgent telegram to her husband de-

She was confronted by Leila in a role of despair. Bayard had telephoned that he could not get home for dinner. He would not be home in time to take Leila to the theater as he had promised. Leila was in a frenzy. She had nothagreed with them.

ing to do but wait for her man to come and take her somewhere. Daphne understood the tragedy of the modern wife: dowered with freedom, pampered with amusements, deprived of the blessing of toil, unaccustomed pulled out a set of parts. When she to seraglian torpor, she must yet wait stumbled over them he cast his eyes on the whims or necessities of her hus-

> Daphne reconsidered her decisions Better all the difficulties and heartaches of the actress-trade than this prison loafing of wifely existence. She had something to do.

> > CHAPTER X.

The next day Batterson telephoned her that he had called a rehearsal with the company. Daphne went to the theater in terror. The stage looked utterly forlorn with the actors and actresses standing about in their street clothes. Under the bright lights with the people made up and the audience in full bloom, like a vast garden, there would be impersonality and stimulation; but the present scene was as doleful as the funeral of an unpopular man. Courage was largely a matter of her superself forcing her reluctant feet forward. A soldier ordered to leave a bombproof shelter for an advance, a playground of shrapnel, has just the struggle with his vaso-motor system that Daphne had with hers.

With the kindliest smile an amiable wolf ever wore Batterson invited the fluttering lamb to come to the stream and drink. Daphne came forward in trance and heard Batterson say:

"Ladies and gentlemen-Miss Kip, our new understudy. Give her all the help you can."

Miss Kemble had graciously chosen to be present for that purpose, though the result was only to increase Daphne's embarrassment. An imitation in the presence of the living model was a double load to carry.

Daphne's hopes of becoming a great actress receive a rude shock, but she is given a chance to show what she can do, and again it is Duane to whom she owes the chance. She is afraid of the obligation under which she is placed, but Duane assures her that she can repay him in the end.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Total membership of the Brothermanding that he come on at once and houd of Bookbinders is almost 16,000 make love to the audience, and if you can capture that you can slap my face every time you see me." Daphne was astounded. She was engaged! She was exultant and "And I'm terribly anxious to get you counsel.