SCHOOL LEGISLATION

(From Farm Bureau News)

W. E. Voss, County Superintendent

The new school laws passed by the 1919 Legislature of Nebraska seem unusual in number and effect. They will materially effect every kind of school organization in the state, which includes private, parochial and public schools. The laws that are, no doubt, of greatest concern to all these schools are the ones that have to do with changes in the respective courses of study and the certification of the teachers that are to teach these schools, while the law that is, doubtless, of greatest interest to those concerned in public schools, is the one that will bring about the redistricting of the county's school districts.

So far over thirty new school laws have been reported as signed by the Governor. About sixteen of these will effect us in Dakota County, as far as the public schools are concerned. Three of the laws apply to the town school districts only that have a school census of at least 150 children between the ages of five and twenty-one years of age, ten of them effect both town and rural schools, and three deal with rural schools only.

A summary of the laws that will be of interest apparently to the greatest number of people is given as follows: S. F. 37 gives all districts with more than 150 pupils the power to vote a maximum school levy up to 100 mills, when approved by 60 per cent of the school voters. S. F. 93 requires that every teacher test and examine all children for defective sight, hearing, teeth, and mouth breathing. She must do this according to rules prescribed by the board of health. A school board, however, may hire a physician to do this work in place of having the teacher or teachers attend to it. H. R. 143 requires that a child of school age, in order to stay out of school to work, must have a permit for this purpose. This permit to work must be filed with the state labor commissioner. S. F. 261 provides for redistricting the county for school purposes. The county superintendent and two school electors redistrict the county and arrange for hearings upon proposed districts, and submit the propositions to the school voters concerned. It takes a majority of the vote cast in each district to accept the new district.

Noted Generals Coming

Two noted army officers, General Leonard Wood and General W. L. Seibert, will appear on the program at the semi-centennial celebration of the University of Nebraska, May 23 to 26. General Seibert, who is chief of the chemical warfare service, will speak at the dedication of the new University chemical laboratory, and General Wood will deliver the commencement address and review the University's battalions. The University is fifty years old and the semi-centennial celebration will be held in connection with commencement week. Rev. Frank G. Smith, pastor of the First Central Congregational church of Omaha, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon. Special programs will be given Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday, May 23, 24, 25, and 26. Arrangements have been made to entertain all alumni and former students.
