SALIX LOSES TO DAKOTA CITY

If you failed to see the ball game Sunday between the local team and the Salix bunch, you missed the best game played on the home grounds this season. Salix came over with a crowd of rooters determined to get revenge for the walloping our boys gave them the week before on their home ground, and they came pretty near taking home the bacon—but alas, Ray was there with the goods in pinches, and had their number. Our boys had one bad inning, the 4th, when two flies, that would have been easy outs for the regular fielders, with two passes and a wild pitch, gave Salix three runs. The home boys got busy in the fifth and chased two runs across, and again in the eighth with three more. Salix started their half of the 9th by the first man up getting a hit. He was advanced, to third on two easy outs, and scored on a hit by the Salix pitcher. The next man up, the head of their batting list, fanned the air for the fourth time, and the game was over. Ray Heikes pitched a good game, and with the regular outfield would have held them to one score. He allowed 5 hits, gave 3 passes—the first of the season, and struck out 11 batters. The Salix pitcher gave 6 hits, 2 passes, and struck out 7 batters. Score 5 to 4.

Seventy-three people were in attendance at the various culling and caponizing demonstrations held during the week. It was emphasized that poultry profits are not based altogether on the number of hens in the flock, but rather on the number of eggs that the hens lay. The culling work which has been carried out in various flocks, shows that thirty per cent of the hens do not pay for their feed, while ten per cent never lay an egg. These should be eliminated from the flock, making room for the good layers. Some interesting reports are being received from the culling campaigns. In a flock of 125 hens, 40 were culled out. Before the culling 16 eggs a day were laid by the flock and after the culling 23 were laid. This shows that overcrowding the flock with poor layers is not profitable.

The report that Dr. Maxwell's car was stolen from a Sioux City garage one day last week was a mistake. The doctor had left his car there for repairs, and when he called for it there was no one in, and he took the car and came home. Stowell states that he had stopped to adjust the lights on his car when the man fired on them, and Galler claims the party was taking his onions from a patch adjoining the road. Stowell drove his car to Homer, where medical aid was secured for the injured ones. Galler was arrested by Sheriff Geo. Cain and lodged in the county jail. At the time of his arrest he was armed with a Winchester rifle and a shotgun. He was bound over to the district court Monday on a charge of assault with intent to kill or wound. He furnished a bond of $2000 for his appearance in the district court and was released.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Lang came up from Omaha Saturday and are spending a couple of weeks in the home of Mrs. Lang's parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. Van de Zedde.

A fine rain fell Tuesday night of this week, breaking the prolonged heat spell and relieving the corn crop, which had begun to suffer to some extent from the dry weather.

It seems as though County Commissioner O. W. Fisher isn't looking after his district in the matter of road work to suit the editor of the Eagle, who makes it a practice of sponging his rides. Verily, some people are hard to suit.

Congressman R. E. Evans arrived home Monday from Washington, D. C., on a few weeks' vacation, the illness of his wife, who has been confined to her home with a severe attack of rheumatism, is the reason of his visit here at this time. Little is being done in congress at present, except by some of the more important committees.

A decision was rendered in the district court here Monday by Judge Graves governing the seizure and disposition of booze cars. The case hinged on the Jim Davis automobile that was confiscated by Sheriff Geo. Cain, and advertised for sale a few weeks ago. The Wycoff Auto Co., of Sioux City showed up with a mortgage on the car and stopped the sale. Now Judge Graves orders the car to be sold, and the proceeds, instead of going to the school fund, will go to pay off the mortgage and court costs.

If the postmaster-editor of the Eagle, with his cock-eye and laugh like a jackass, would devote a little of his time to looking after the duties of the postoffice in this place, instead of galavanting over the country on "lodge business," etc., the patrons of the office might not be compelled to sort over their mail and return what is indiscriminately fired into their boxes, and special delivery mail, could be delivered inside of two years; also a plate advertisement of the republican state ticket mailed to the Herald by a Lincoln advertising firm just before the last election might have been delivered on time instead of being found a week or two later in an empty tie sack in Chicago and returned to us too late for use. With salary paid to third class postmasters, and rent, light, fuel and clerk hire thrown in, the patrons are entitled to some service, and just a little courtesy, which they are not getting.

FARM BUREAU NOTES

C. R. Young, County Agent

Of the many calls that come to a hog belt County Agent, at this season of the year, a very high percent are to give advice relative to swine diseases.

Although a large amount of time in this county is given to hog cholera control work, yet herds infected with this disease constitute but a small portion of the sick hogs visited. The past spring, many weaklings in the pig family were produced. A good portion of those that survived this early trouble are now victims of the usual maladies.

Of these minion ailments, worms are undoubtedly the source of the greatest amount of trouble. Not only do worms kill thousands of hogs, but they break down the system thus giving entrance to many diseases.

Many worm remedies are on the market but our observation leads us to believe that most of them are fakes. The best and cheapest treatment consists of giving six grains of santonin and four grains of calomel per one hundred pounds of pig. If pigs weigh 35 pounds figure three to the hundred pounds, if 50 pounds, then two. Divide the herd into bunches of 25 or 30 pigs and estimate their weight. Have the druggist put up the required amount for each bunch as the dose will be too small to weigh at home. Before feeding, starve the pigs for 24 hours, giving water only. Mix the medicine with a thin slop, and while still stirring add enough more shorts to make a thick mixture. This will prevent the insoluble drugs from settling to the bottom. If shorts are not to be had, soaked oats, or ground oats or may be used. Much of the success will depend on thorough mixing.

Do not give more than half to three-quarters of the feed, so every pig will eat ravenously until he gets his share. After treating, skip one feed and then go back to the regular feed. When the herd is unwell, feed the smaller and weaker ones by themselves. In badly infected herds, it will be well to repeat in ten days or two weeks. Much of the success depends upon the thoroughness of the work.

Following this treatment, or in clean herds, a good home made worm preventative and hog conditioner should be kept before the herd in a self-feeder. A good mixture which is recommended by the State Extension department, consists of the following:

- Charcoal (coal slack or wood ashes) 1 bu.
- Air slacked lime, 8 lbs.
- Salt, 5 lbs.
- Sulphur, 4 lbs.
- Copperas, 4 lbs.

Another disease which leaves the patient in about the same condition is necrotic enteritis. This disease characterizes itself by the roughened condition of the hair and the rapid emaciation of the animal. Scours is generally present in the early stages. These characteristics apply to wormy pigs, but in conjunction they are apt to be "pot-bellied." If a post-mortem is made, look for worms in the small intestines and for cheesy areas in the large, which is the location of enteritis.

The government treatment for enteritis consists of a mixture of one part blue vitriol, four parts hypophosphite of soda, two parts charcoal and six parts common salt. Feed in slop night and morning, one teaspoonful to each 100 lbs. liveweight.

Another form of this same disease characterizes itself by swellings on the head, generally over the snout. These contain a cheesy substance. While yet small, they may be cured by cutting away as much as possible of the cheesy portion and then burning the balance with caustic potash.

A pneumonial condition is very common among young shoats in the summer time. About the only symptoms observed is that the pig thumps and has but little appetite. When not of an infectious form, this disease does not lend itself readily to medicine. The best treatment consists of keeping the pig from eating and lying where there is any dust, and give feed that is moist.

Strict sanitary measures will in a very large degree prevent all of these troubles, as well as the greater one—cholera. The use of lots of clean water, keeping feeding and sleeping quarters free from dust, and the use of air-slacked lime sprinkled about the yards and sheds all go a long way towards stamping out disease. Where shade is plentiful many hogs will be the better off if shut entirely from the hog house. Frequent changes of pastures also brings good results. One hundred head should be the maximum number of pigs to run together and this number is too great where there is much difference in size.

"That's just what I've always wished a cigarette would do —satisfy"

The feature of Chesterfields is that they begin where other cigarettes leave off.

In other words, besides pleasing the taste, Chesterfields go 'em all one better—they satisfy! Just like a long drink of cold water satisfies when you're downright thirsty.

No other cigarette can give you this new thing in cigarette enjoyment because none can copy Chesterfield's blend.

It's a blend of the finest TURKISH tobaccos from Xanthi, Cavalla, Smyrna and Samsoun and several varieties of the choicest DOMESTIC. And the blend itself—the skill with which these tobaccos have been proportioned—is a real discovery in cigarette making.
